SUPPORT: Hartley Alleyne

KENT on Sunday readers have voiced their anger over a Home Office decision to deport a former professional cricketer.

This newspaper has been inundated with messages of support for Hartley Alleyne, 50, who faces being removed from the United Kingdom in a week.

Mr Alleyne used to play cricket for the West Indies, Worcestershire and Kent. He now coaches the sport at a Kent school.

Thanking KoS readers for their support, Mr Alleyne, who has lived in the UK for 29 years, said he was "shocked" by the decision to deport him.

He was refused a work permit and told to leave after the Home Office ruled his experience does not equate to the two A-levels needed to coach and work as a boarding assistant at St Edmund's School in Canterbury.

Mr Alleyne has an English wife, two sons aged nine and five and a 24-year-old daughter living in the country.

He told KoS: "I feel really shocked after coming here for such a long, long time and playing cricket and giving back to the youngsters what I've taken out of the game. It's heartbreaking, not only for me, but for the youngsters that I really wanted to help."

Mr Alleyne said his lawyers are still trying to see if they can find a way for him to stay.

"At the moment I'm just in limbo waiting on a few phone calls."

His family are struggling to accept his impending deportation, he said.

"The little boys are a bit too young to understand, but my daughter can't believe it either. A lot of people can't believe it."

Although he was born in Barbados, Mr Alleyne does not regard the island as home after living in England most of his life.

"I look at Barbados as a place I go for a holiday and I look at England as my home," he said. "If I didn't adore the UK I

Lords' pensions vote gives glimmer of hope

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

A DEFIANT vote in the House of Lords has paved the way to possible compensation for Kent steelworkers who lost pensions when their plant went bust.

Peers defeated the Government by 181 votes to 126 in favour of a lifeboat fund for tens of thousands of pensioners who lost the entitlements through no fault of their own.

They backed a Conservative and Liberal Democrat amendment to the Pensions Bill, proposing the use of unclaimed assets or a Treasury loan to reimburse the pensioners.

Reimburse

Andrew Parr, 62, from the Isle of Sheppey, had his pension cut by more than half when Allied Steel and Wire (ASW) went bust in 2002. More than 1,000 workers at ASW plants in Sheerness and Cardiff lost part or all of their pensions.

The spokesman for the Pensions Action Group said the lifeboat fund would reimburse 90 per cent of pensions that were lost. Pensions would be paid faster and according to scheme age rather than state age, he added.

In Mr Parr's case, his pension scheme was supposed to pay out when he turned 62, but the state pension age is 65.

He said the vote offered a "very, very dim light at the end of the tunnel".

But he now has to persuade local Labour MPs to vote in favour of the amendment when it comes before the Commons, probably next month.

In April, Derek Wyatt, Labour MP for Sittingbourne and Sheppey, voted against setting up the lifeboat fund. The amendment was beaten by just 22 votes.

"Currently it's 5-0 to us," said Mr Parr. "The Ombudsman found in our favour; the select committee found in our favour; the European Court of Justice found in our favour; the High Court with the judicial review found in our favour and the Lords have found in our favour. "What does the Government need to be persuaded, for goodness sake?"

But Tony Blair said Wednesday night's vote in the Lords was "irresponsible".

And Mr Wyatt indicated that he would vote against the amendment when it goes to the Commons.

He told KoS: "I'm working with our ministers on the issue, but the Prime Minister said categorically on Wednesday that he could not agree to the lifeboat fund."

The MP said he was backed by former ASW workers and other constituents.

But Mr Parr said: "The majority of the workers do not back him and think he betrayed us. I think he is suffering from selective memory."

Mr Wyatt said he was examining other ways of recouping the lost pensions and has been in talks with insurance firm Prudential. He is due to meet representatives from Norwich Union.

On Wednesday, Mr Parr was among campaigners who stripped off for a pensions protest in Parliament Square, London.

Man in court on knifing charge

A MAN has been charged following a stabbing on Wednesday.

The 15-year-old victim was taken to Medway Maritime Hospital for treatment to a stab wound to his side following an incident near Breach Lane in Lower Halstow.

Police said he is in a conscious and stable condition.

Andrew Woolman, 26, of Lower Halstow, was charged with wounding with intent.

He was due to appear before Sittingbourne Magistrates Court on Friday.

A second man has been arrested in connection with the incident.

A great day to go to the farm

FARMS across the region are opening to the public today.

Open Farm Sunday is organised by the group Linking Environment and Farming and supported by the National Farmers' Union.

About 50 farms are being opened up across the South East.

Sandra Nichols, spokeswoman for the South East NFU, said: "Open Farm Sunday presents a great opportunity to find out why farming matters to the consumer, the environment and the economy."

For details of all farms that are open today, log on to www.farmsunday.org for a full list.

Police car and lorry in crash

A POLICE car was involved in a road crash on Thursday afternoon.

Kent Police said the car and a HGV ended up on the central reservation of the A249 dual carriageway at Detling in Kent. No-one was seriously hurt.

Meanwhile, Kent on Sunday has asked Kent Police to provide details of accidents involving police vehicles in the county for the last five years. Last week we reported how more than three quarters of officers caught speeding or jumping red lights did not receive tickets.

But the force said it will take at least a week to compile the data because of a changeover of computer systems.

Our readers rush to back cricketer's desperate bid to avoid deportation from UK

Your words of support for Hartley

■ This is yet another example of the unbending and inflexible attitude of the authorities.

Peter and Pamela Elgar, Bridge

■ I cannot understand how he has lived here for 30 years and is now considered as undesirable and must be deported.

R Thackham, Birchington

■ He seems dedicated to helping young people to become ideal citizens – we could do with more people like him.

Mrs V Jarrett, Sittingbourne

■ He is a role model for young people and an exemplary coach, who has provided years of loyal service both to the school and local community.

Chris Hitchcock, by email

■ I read last night for the first time of the proposed deportation of Hartley Alleyne, and I cannot overstate my disgust.

Philip Taylor, Tunbridge Wells

■ It seems to be the Home Office has its priorities all wrong and is picking on easy targets.

Gillian Morgan, by email

■ Hartley is special – he has that extra energy and vitality to interest and develop the children he teaches.

Fay Steed, by email

■ With what he has done for this county, country, and cricket in general, I think this decision is disgusting.

Bernie Rawcliffe, by email

■ It is absolutely outrageous that someone like Hartley, who has given us so much, should be treated in this shabby way.

Dave James, by email

■ He is a very dedicated teacher, much loved and admired by all our students.

Judith Sauerzapf-Christopherson, Faversham

■ He has lived and worked here for nearly 30 years, yet the Home Office says he is not qualified to teach cricket. Ministers need to live in the real world.

Doug Turner, Margate

■ It appears to be grave travesty of justice to even contemplate deporting Alleyne when the Government allows other unsavory aliens to remain.

Ernie Whiting, by email

■ Hartley is a credit to our society and should be allowed to stay.

Mandy and Peter, by email

■ Refusing him a work permit because he lacks a NVQ level 3 is a typical example of bureaucratic box ticking so beloved of jobsworths the world over.

Dave Stewart, Deal

■ I support Hartley staying. He's just what we need – a hard-working, sporty great role model.

Rosalind Hill, by email

■ It would be a great shame if the decision to deport him were carried through. My own child at St Edmund's thinks he is fabulous.

Theresa Tilbury, by email

■ My son has attends the school and we were astonished and outraged to hear that one of his favourite teachers has been put in this seemingly unjust and incomprehensible situation.

wouldn't stay here."

He passed on his thanks to the many readers who have contacted KoS to show their support.

Damian Green, the Conservative immigration spokesman, criticised the decision to deport Mr Alleyne.

The MP for Ashford said: "This seems to be one of the very few cases where the Home Office is applying the rules strictly.

"There's a huge amount of chaos surrounding the immigration system and I suspect Mr Alleyne has just been caught because he is trying to act legally."

Former England and Kent cricket star Dean Headley slammed the Home Office.

He said: "I don't understand it because if it's all to do with the qualifications, what better qualification can you have than being very good at the game?"

"I just think it's quite a short-sighted view when this guy has actually added something to our country."

Robust

Mr Alleyne, a right-handed batsman and fast bowler, played for Barbados, Worcestershire, Kent and Natal between 1978-79 and 1989-90.

Julian Brazier, Tory MP for Canterbury and Whitstable, has written to Immigration Minister Liam Byrne demanding that Mr Alleyne's case be reviewed.

KoS managed to reach Mr Byrne by phone on Friday. He said he would call back but had failed to do so by the time of going to press.

Referring to a previous statement released by the department, a spokesman said: "I understand you've had a very thorough briefing on this case from one of my colleagues. There's no change in our position."

The week before, a spokesman from the Home Office said: "The Government has made it clear that it will take a robust approach to removing people from the country where they have no legal right to be here."

What do you think of the Home Office's decision? Write to Dean at Kent on Sunday, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent, TN25 6SR or you can email dean.headley@kosmedia.co.uk.

'We've got to move fast on new homes'

EXCLUSIVE Hazel Blears, would-be successor to John Prescott, talks to JAMIE McGINNES about housing, immigration and fighting the next election

TARGET: Hazel Blears says the Government's housing plans are a long way off Picture: REX FEATURES

HAZEL Blears has admitted the Government is facing a race against time to meet its house-building targets.

Talking to Kent on Sunday, the Labour deputy leadership candidate claimed obstructive Tory councils were partly to blame.

In a wide-ranging interview, the Labour chairman said her party would struggle to keep all its Kent seats at the next general election.

She said housing and immigration were two of the key issues in the county. More should be done to calm public concerns about immigration, said Ms Blears.

And she conceded that the Government's house-building goals – including 160,000 new homes in the Thames Gateway by 2016 – were still a long way off.

Mammoth

Ms Blears said Deputy Prime Minister John Prescott had failed to build enough houses when he was in charge of spearheading the Government's "growth area" plans because he had been given too many responsibilities.

Asked if Mr Prescott had done a good job in overseeing the mammoth plans, Ms Blears said she thought he did well with the Decent Homes initiative – bringing property standards up.

But she added: "What was not done, was building the number of new homes we need to see. In a way we're victims of our own success. The economy's so strong, there's more single-person households, there's more people coming to live particularly in London and the South East.

"We've got to move really fast now on building new homes."

And Ms Blears seemed to suggest Mr Prescott had been unable to deliver the housing because he was given too many duties.

"He was deputy leader, Deputy Prime Minister and he had a big government department. I think that's too much."

The Office of Deputy Prime Minister was turned into the Department of Communities and Local Government (DCLG) in 2006 and control was handed to Ruth Kelly. Mr Prescott was made a Minister without Portfolio.

A damning report by the National Audit Office last month called for urgent action to make sure the right level of infrastructure was being built to underpin the Government's huge housing schemes.

The NAO called on the DCLG to come up with "more coherent" plans and make sure investment was better targeted.

Ms Blears said that Conservative councils were also to blame for holding up house-building.

"The Tory authorities have got to recognise that we are going to have to build new homes," she said.

A decade ago, a tenth of the public thought immigration was an issue. But now, said Ms Blears, it was the top concern of 40 per cent of people.

The tough-talking former Home Office Minister said she did not want to see an amnesty for illegal immigrants and was against a new Sangatte refugee camp in France.

But she denied the rise in concern over immigration was because New Labour had failed.

"Migration is going on at a rate nobody could have predicted. You've got the equivalent of the population of Brazil moving around the world every year.

"If you think back 10 years, it wasn't really that big an issue. Now, people are seeing their communities change, almost daily."

Tougher immigration controls were already coming into place as a result of government policies to make border agencies work closer together, she said.

And the introduction next year of a points system for letting people into the UK should alleviate anxieties.

"We've got to be absolutely determined to make sure that works and only people who meet the criteria are allowed to come."

Although Kent has historically been a Tory stronghold, Ms Blears claimed Labour could make gains at the next general election in places such as Gravesham. But she said the party would first have to concentrate on retaining marginal seats such as Sittingbourne and Sheppey and Medway.

"It's going to be tough," she said. "The next election is going to be the most difficult we've faced for a long time."

"We've got a resurgent Tory Party – it's no longer embarrassing to be a Tory. People are going to have to fight literally house to house, street to street for every single vote."

Prescott's affair took shine off 'good career'

JOHN Prescott's affair with one of his secretaries was "unfortunate", according to Hazel Blears.

Ms Blears, who wants to succeed Mr Prescott as deputy leader of the Labour Party, said his relationship with Tracey Temple had taken the gloss off his achievements.

She told Kent on Sunday: "It was really unfortunate for him, to be honest, to end on that kind of note after a long and good career in politics.

"He's had a very difficult time this last couple of years."

Mr Prescott was hospitalised last weekend after falling ill on a train from his Hull constituency to London. He was reported to be sitting up and joking with hospital staff on Wednesday.

He is due to step down as deputy leader of the Labour Party on June 27.

'There's no way I'll let my son join the Army at 17'

MARK WAS only 17 when he cradled his dying friend's head in his lap and wept as the life bled from his young body.

Twenty-five years ago this week Mark Eyles-Thomas was armed with a rifle and bayonet on the frozen slopes of Mount Longdon, battling to take Port Stanley as the Falklands War came to its bloody end.

Now the war veteran from Birling has another battle on his hands as he begs his 17-year-old son not to sign up to the Army just yet.

"You're too young at 17," Mr Eyles-Thomas, now 42, told Kent on Sunday.

"I've told him there's no way he's joining before he's 18. It doesn't really make much difference how old you are when you see such carnage and chaos for the first time but there's no way I'm going to let him join at 17."

He was the same age as son Dominic when he helped his country fight for possession of the desolate South Atlantic islands in 1982.

He had initially joined up because of pressure from his father to pursue his talent at cricket – he first played for Kent at the age of 10.

"My father wanted me to carry on playing county cricket but I was a difficult teenager. I thought I knew it at all but it turned out my parents did."

"I just wanted to get away from it all."

Mr Eyles-Thomas needed his parents' permission to join the Army, which they granted, and he trained to be a Para.

"It gave me a purpose in life," he said.

He and his young friends hoped to go to Northern Ireland but were told they would have to wait until they were 18.

This was a disappointment for the proud young men who faced the miserable and humiliating prospect of being sent back to camp.

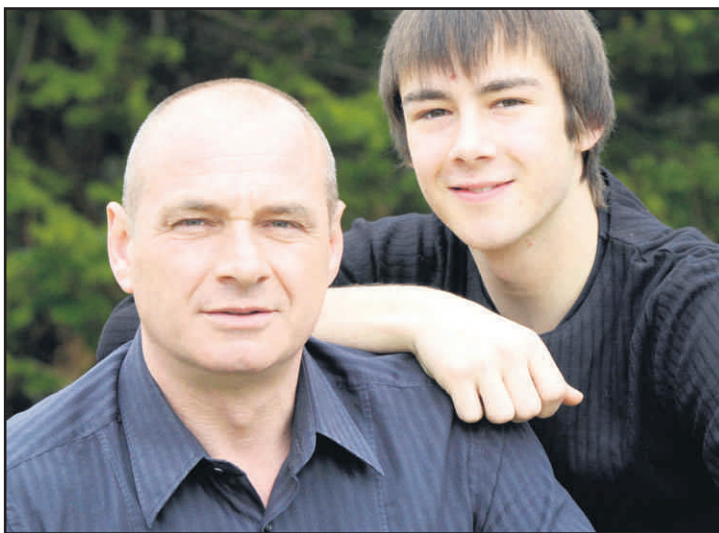

But then came the Argentinian invasion of the Falklands.

The long-running dispute between Britain and Argentina over the ownership of the islands 8,000 miles away began following the founding of an Argentine settlement on the islands in 1826.

A few years later Britain took control and the two countries had disputed ownership ever since.

Workmen and a ragtag group of South

YOUNG GUNS: (l-r) Steven Jelf, Jason Burt and Stuart McAllister – Burt, just 17, was the youngest British soldier to die in the Falklands

American soldiers landed on South Georgia Island on March 19, 1982, before the Argentine military junta invaded a week later to reclaim the islands they called the Malvinas.

Mr Eyles-Thomas said: "We were all really frustrated. We had spent a year-and-a-half training to be fully-fledged Paras."

"Then we were told we were being deployed to the Falklands. We were glad to be joining – we wanted to go. We were all proud to serve. We were following orders. Politics didn't come into it."

The men assumed the dispute would be brought to an end by the time they landed. But by the time they had arrived, the then Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher had declared war.

He recalled: "Everything changed then – that's when we knew we were really going in."

The battles raged across the Falklands and on the night of June 11, 1982, with Mr Eyles-Thomas and his teenage band of brothers thrown into the bloodiest land battle the British Army had fought since the Korean War in the 1950s.

The men of 3 Para fought for control of the frost-covered Mount Longdon, which barred the way to the capital Port Stanley.

That night, 23 paratroopers paid the ultimate price, including three of Mr Eyles-Thomas' close friends and for a quarter of a century he has been haunted by that night's events.

But he has been helped to exorcise the demons of that horror with the publication of his war memoirs, Sod That For A Game of Soldiers.

In the book, he relives that fateful night on the frozen slopes with 600 armed enemy troops waiting for his battalion to attack.

"What was I doing in this position, thousands of miles from home and the people I loved? At 17, I wasn't even old enough to buy a drink in the pub," he said.

"Despite our modern technology and sophisticated weaponry, this battle was men fighting each other face-to-face, hand-to-hand, yard-by-yard.

CASUALTIES: 3 Para lost 23 brave men during the battle to take Mount Longdon

Over the next few hours, the terrified teenager braved the enemies' bullets but had to watch three close friends – Jason Burt, Ian Scrivens and Neil Grose – die on the bloody battle field.

Scrivens was shot dead as they spoke. "All of a sudden he fell across my lap and fluid splattered on my face. I pushed him off me with an instinctive and repulsive jerk. He lay motionless in a limp, crumpled heap. I sat there not believing what had happened. One minute I was talking to Scrivens with my hand on his shoulder, the next – zap – he was gone."

Numb with fear and shock, Mr Eyles-Thomas somehow made it through the night and by morning, the summit was taken.

BROTHERS IN ARMS: Ian Scrivens later died by the side of Mark Eyles-Thomas in the battle for Mount Longdon

The couple had two children, but the marriage didn't last – the demons of the Falklands were too powerful.

In 1985, Mr Eyles-Thomas left the Army and moved into security and now runs a company in south-east London.

He is remarried but is refusing to let his son Dominic – studying A-levels at King's School in Rochester – join until he's old enough to do so without his parents' permission.

"I believe strongly that no 17-year-old should have to risk his life for his country."

"No parent should have to live with the knowledge that they gave their approval for their son to die in war."

TAKE CARE OF YOUR RUBBISH

You wouldn't use an unlicensed taxi.

So why use an unlicensed waste remover?

The law now states that if you have any of your rubbish removed and it ends up being flytipped, you could be held responsible and fined. When dealing with waste removal services or tradesmen where rubbish will be generated, like builders, plumbers, gardening contractors, always ask them for a valid waste carriers licence.

Follow these 3 simple steps to help protect yourself and the environment.

HOW TO CHECK

- 1 Ask the waste removal service/tradesman for their waste carrier licence number.

MODELS wearing clothes created by talented young designers from a Kent college hit the catwalk at a prestigious show.

The work of 27 graduates of the University College for the Creative Arts at Rochester was shown off in front of leading figures from the fashion industry.

Their designs were watched by about 1,000 people at Graduate Fashion Week, which was held at Battersea Park Arena in London.

Now into its 16th year, it is seen as a shop window for the UK's hottest young designers to show off their skills.

More than 1,000 fashion students from 48 universities vied at the four-day event for the River Island gold award – and a £20,000 prize money. Victoria Beckham was among this year's judges.

Inspiration

Jarayd Fee, 21, from Northern Ireland, was one of the Rochester students whose designs were modelled on the catwalk.

His shiny, bright assortment of adolescent-looking clothing took him four months to make.

Explaining the look's unusual inspiration, he said: "It was based on a self-help book for mothers about how girls form social groups, so it was quite theoretical to start off with."

"It's also inspired by John Hughes movies [e.g. Ferris Bueller's Day Off and The Breakfast Club] and mixing up high-school styles."

Fanny Kellerman, 22, from Sweden, said her Insides Out women's collection, which mainly used yellow, white and grey colours, represented "issues of body image and self perception".

Angela Christodoulou, 24, from north London, said her anarchic men's clothes were meant to symbolise "naivety and self-destruction".

The fashion design graduate now has work experience lined up with names including Topman and eventually wants to do an MA.

Thomass Atkinson, director of studies for fashion at the University College for the Creative Arts at Rochester, said the show had gone "wonderfully well", adding that the standards were constantly rising at the annual event.

He said: "I'm very pleased with the students in terms of their overall standard. Every year there seems to be an enhancement, for various different reasons."

Mr Atkinson said he was impressed with the students' designs and the way they had made the clothes, which were worn by professional models on the catwalk.

He said the event provided an important opportunity for graduates to showcase their designs.

"It gives them a huge, vast profile and an exhibition area to really launch themselves in. There's a fantastic industry attendance here and there's potential obviously for employment."

He said many graduates from the Kent college end up working all over the world in places such as New Zealand and Australia, China, Japan and across Europe.

Graduate Fashion Week took place from last Sunday to Wednesday. The Rochester students' designs took the catwalk on Monday.

Apart from Victoria Beckham, judges for the show's overall gold award included Glenda Bailey, editor-in-chief of US Harpers Bazaar and Richard Bradbury, managing director of River Island.

Ms Bailey said the event provided the chance to discover the "new guard" of the UK's fashion industry.

"British designers bring outstanding dedication and creativity to their work," she said.

Mr Bradbury said: "These individuals are the future of British fashion."

For the first time in Graduate Fashion Week's history, judges split the event's gold award between two designers on Wednesday night – Jasper Chadprajong, from Ravensbourne and Nicolas Thomas, from Bristol.

'Share gypsy sites'

A COUNCIL has called for gypsy and traveller sites to be shared "more equally".

Sevenoaks District Council is lobbying the South East England Regional Assembly (Seera) to spread the sites "equitably across the region and Kent as a whole".

New research carried out by the council reveals that dozens of new pitches are needed to accommodate Sevenoaks' gypsy and traveller communities in the coming years.

The council said the number of gypsies and travellers in Sevenoaks was "considerably higher" than neighbouring areas.

It commissioned an independent study to find out how many more pitches would be required to meet existing and future need. Each pitch provides enough room for one permanent caravan or mobile home.

The report concluded 67 new pitches would be needed in the next five years.

Cllr Carol Clark, the council's cabinet member with responsibility for housing, said: "The next step will be to submit our findings to Seera, which will have the final say on the number and location of any new pitches."

"We will be encouraging Seera to ensure that new provision is shared more equally across Kent and the region in general."

Sevenoaks council argues that it suffers from "acute" planning restraints, such as a high amount of greenbelt land and has called on other authorities to provide more caravan pitches.

A council spokesman said: "This will provide gypsies and travellers with increased choice and seek to balance the high level of existing provision in some local authority areas, with very little in others."

In 2008, Seera's regional planning board will outline where it thinks pitches should be provided in the region.

Sevenoaks District Council recently received funding to provide three extra pitches within its Edenbridge gypsy and traveller site.

Figures released earlier this year revealed there are nearly 1,000 gypsy and traveller caravans in Kent. They showed Maidstone had the most – 297. Sevenoaks had 147.

The information was revealed in a parliamentary written answer.

A BELGIAN woman has been jailed after trying to smuggle cocaine with a street value of £300,000 into the UK.

Sarah Sas, 23, from Antwerp, was caught in July 2006 by British customs officers at Coquelles in France with 6.84kg of the Class A hidden in two bags.

Sas admitted knowing that smuggling into the UK was illegal but claimed she thought the drugs were cannabis, not cocaine. However, at trial the judge rejected this defence and she was sentenced to seven years and four months in prison at Canterbury Crown Court on Tuesday.

A spokeswoman for HM Revenue & Customs, said: "HMRC is working at the forefront of the fight to stop drugs entering the UK. We aim to protect society from this activity wherever we detect it, at the borders or inland."

HI TONY: Keynote speaker Carole Chaplin told of her time at Downing Street with the Blairs, right

I tripped up big time, admits Cherie's guru

CAROLE Caplin fought back tears as she spoke of her regret at her relationship with convicted fraudster Peter Foster.

The 45-year-old former style guru to Cherie Blair was talking to guests at the Women in Business lunch in Maidstone.

In her speech, Ms Caplin claimed she was once offered more than £1 million to reveal all about her experience of Downing Street, but turned the money down.

The former glamour model said she had not been aware Mrs Blair was the wife of the Prime Minister when they met.

Ms Caplin and Mrs Blair attracted controversy in 2002 with the Cheriegate scandal, concerning the purchase of two flats in Bristol.

A discount had been secured for Mrs Blair by Ms Caplin's then boyfriend, Mr Foster.

lunch: "I did get involved with Peter Foster – a man I should not have got involved in a relationship with. Only afterwards did I start seeing the other sides of his personality. I tripped up big time. But I firmly believe that what happened to me has helped me to continue helping other people.

Tears

"When you are under attack, as I was, you cannot wallow in it. You need to spend time with the friends and family who know who you really are. And you need to remember that you are not that thing that is being described in the newspapers."

Ms Caplin, who founded LifeSmart to help workers improve their health, was the keynote speaker at the Business Link lunch held at the Ramada Hotel, on Tuesday. One of the guests told Kent on Sunday that Ms Caplin was close to tears when she talked about her experience at Downing Street.

"She did get a bit emotional about it all," our source said.

Our source said that Ms Caplin, came across as "charming, but vulnerable" and was a hit with guests.

It was reported this week that Mrs Blair had invited Ms Caplin to a private party at Downing Street for what would be the first time back in four years. It was speculated that she could soon return to working for the Blairs as a lifestyle guru, stylist and dietician.

She went into exile from Downing Street in 2003 after a series of newspaper stories. Ms Caplin was reported to have showered naked with Mrs Blair and napped in Mr Blair's bed.

KoS requested an interview with Ms Caplin, but the bid was turned down because we refused to agree not to ask her about her time with the Blairs.

NHS says 100 bed closures is 'good news'

...but consultant says move is to help clawback £21million deficit

A HUNDRED hospital beds are to close across the east of the county in the next two months.

East Kent Hospitals NHS Trust insists the closures – which will hit hospitals in Margate, Dover, Ashford and Canterbury – are good news for patients.

But a senior consultant believes the closures are a cost-cutting move to get health chiefs out of a £21million deficit – and the cuts could have drastic repercussions for patients.

A recent internal newsletter sent to trust staff broke the news of the debt. Acting chief executive Rupert Eggington wrote: "These tough times are not over yet. We are required to make a further £21m of efficiency savings in 2007/8."

Dr John Sewell, a clinical physician at William Harvey Hospital in Ashford and a representative for the British Medical Association (BMA) on the staff committee, said of the potential implications for patients: "This will make it very difficult to meet the requirements for no mixed-sex wards."

"If there is a lower number of wards, there will be a reduction in the number of beds so inevitably

By RICK SENLEY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

more patients will be crammed together.

"This will increase the infection rate and will not benefit patient dignity."

"If the wards are hectic, noisy and crowded, the whole patient experience will be damaged."

The news of the closures comes at a time when the NHS is in the enviable position of having a £510m surplus.

Tragedy

But Peter Carter, general secretary of the Royal College of Nursing, said the figures exposed the tragedy and farce of NHS finances.

Mr Carter said: "We now have a mind-boggling state of affairs in which individual organisations are in deficit to the tune of £911m, while the NHS as a whole has amassed a surplus of £510m."

Dr Sewell added: "I totally support this view and as such am not critical at all of my own trust – they are in a very unenviable position."

"The rigidity of the present financial arrangements in the NHS is such that trusts such as ours are forced to close wards and these sudden closures are very destabilising for staff.

"Even if they remain in a job, it might not be the job that they wish for."

"Central government should allow some trusts to go over-budget to allow some wards to remain open, but we welcome the news that the trust is doing this without massive staff redundancy and they are trying to absorb the staff within the system."

Closure of a large ward can save around £1m a year.

A trust spokesman told Kent on Sunday: "This is a good thing for patients, not a bad thing."

"We will be able to provide day surgery for operations such as hernias and cataracts whereas in the past they would require patients staying in."

"We will be able to provide better health care and patients will be able to get in and out of hospital quicker. We are making a patient's journey through hospital faster, which means there is less risk of contracting any hospital infections."

"But because of the tradition of hospital beds, sometimes people see closing them as some kind of problem."

Still no cost for KCC's USA trip

KENT County Council has asked for extra time to respond to a Freedom of Information request about the cost to the taxpayer of a recent KCC trip to America.

Deputy leader Alex King led a Kent delegation to Virginia last month to take part in celebrations to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the first English-speaking settlement in the New World.

KCC's press office said Cllr King was helping to build long-term trade and tourism links with Virginia. It said he held meetings with business leaders, universities and the State Government of Virginia aimed at strengthening trade initiatives.

But KCC refused to answer questions on how much public money was spent on the trip and how many people it sent.

So Kent on Sunday submitted a

Freedom of Information request, asking for answers.

Under statutory timescales, authorities are required to provide a response within 20 days.

On the 20th day, Caroline Dodge, who is the corporate access to information co-ordinator in the chief executive's department at KCC, said in a statement: "Councillor King's staff officer has recently advised me that he is still collecting receipts and collating information about details and costs of the visit to Virginia, which was still ongoing at the time you submitted your request for information about it."

"We would therefore be obliged if you would allow us [an extra week to] respond to your request."

"This will help us ensure that the information we provide you with will be as up-to-date and accurate as possible."

Rehab reduces reoffending

SENDING drug-driven criminals into rehab instead of jail, cuts re-offending in nearly three quarters of cases, according to a new study.

Researchers at the University of Kent and King's College London found that court-ordered treatment is effective in weaning offenders off crime – and drugs.

Their work studied a group of criminals who went through Drug

Treatment and Testing Orders (DTTOs) across London and Kent, and compared them to users who entered treatment "voluntarily" at the same centres.

Alex Stevens, of the University of Kent, said: "On average, those sentenced to a DTTO reported a 71 per cent reduction in the frequency of offending between the time of arrest and 18 months after."

George's daily diary account of life during World War II

PAST TIMES: Ladies queuing for oranges and lemons in Chatham early in the war

By RICK SENLEY

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

A UNIQUE personal insight into life in Medway during World War Two has been unearthed in a wartime diary written by a former Chatham resident.

A replica of the diary, written by George West, is now on display in the town's library. Its pages will be turned every two months until it can be moved to the St George's Centre at Chatham Maritime.

Mr West wrote the diary every day during the war when he was company secretary of Newcomb's – a navy tailors, hosiers, hatters and shirt makers in Chatham High Street.

Mr West's boss commissioned him to update the diary daily from September 1, 1939, until the end of the war six years later.

Comments

Known as the Newcomb War Diary, it is now the property of the Newcomb family who gave the Chatham Historical Society permission to duplicate the journal.

It is dedicated to the memory of Mr West, the Newcomb and Paine families, and all the Medway people – both service personnel and civilians – who lived through the events described in it.

Chatham Historical Society honourable secretary Sheila Erwin said of the diary, which is almost two-feet high: "Mr West had a strange ability to record a lot of information into just a few words with no personal comments.

"He just reported the relevant points of that day. He wrote a line a day, which was a page a month for six years.

"As the years went by, line-by-line you've got a virtual world history.

"Anyone who reads the diary will relate to it. They'll think, 'That's where mother lived when it was bombed'."

Newcomb's opened for business in 1854. After the original shop was demolished when the Sir John Hawkins flyover was

Project highlights Old Town's appeal

ARTS, crafts, clothing and local produce will be on sale at an open air market in Margate's Old Town.

Stalls will be set up in the old market square from Thursday as part of the Margate Late and Live project. The market will be every Thursday from 4-8pm.

Margate Late and Live aims to regenerate the Old Town with later opening hours for shops and live entertainment in the street. It is part of a drive to bring more people into the historic district.

Organiser Eli Thompson said: "We feel strongly this area has so much to offer so we are trying to bring more people in. After they've been once and seen what the Old Town has to offer they'll want to come again."

Queen's honour for Kent scheme

VOLUNTEERS from Kent who try to make life better for people with hearing difficulties have been honoured by the Queen.

The HiKent Volunteer Visiting Scheme has been named as one of only 71 recipients of the Queen's Award for Voluntary Service around the UK.

Equivalent to an MBE, the award is open to volunteer groups who make a difference in their communities.

HiKent is a network of nearly 150 volunteers who maintain NHS hearing aids and help their predominantly elderly clients learn how to get the best out of them.

The Queen announced in April 2002 the creation of the new, annual award, to mark the occasion of her Golden Jubilee.

MP reveals the 'utterly crazy' overcrowding in our prisons

NEW information has revealed that prisons in Kent are full to bursting, writes Rick Senley.

Tory MP Adam Holloway, who discovered the figures, has branded the situation "utterly crazy".

The Ministry of Justice admitted to the MP for Gravesend that more than half the county's nine prisons were overcrowded with almost 400 too many inmates in all.

The prison population stands at 3,849, more than 10 per cent over the 3,477 normal uncrowded capacity.

Culprit

Mr Holloway told Kent on Sunday: "In Gravesend there are very high levels of crime and anti-social behaviour and one of the biggest problems is that when these people are finally caught up with, the tendency of the courts is to do anything other than give a custodial sentence – because of a lack of prison places – and that's a big problem."

"Whether we like it or not we need more prison places."

"A lot of people who end up in prison are people who life has not shone upon."

"When they are in prison the time should be better used and there should be more emphasis on education and ways to equip prisoners for the outside world. The overcrowding is utterly crazy."

The worst culprit is Elmley jail on the Isle of Sheppey. The official uncrowded capacity is 753 inmates, but as of June 4, there were 986 prisoners crammed into the jail's cells.

Other jails with too many inmates include Canterbury, Cookham Wood, Maidstone and Swaleside.

A Ministry of Justice spokesman said the National Offender Management Service was dealing with pressures on the prison estate by building more capacity.

He said the Government has increased prison capacity by nearly 20,000 places since 1997 and by 3,700 places in the last two years.

"In 2007, capacity will increase by around 2,200 places," the spokesman added.

"The National Offender Management Service is closely monitoring the prison population and continues to investigate options for providing further increases in capacity."

The figures for Kent do not include Dover, which holds immigration detainees, nor temporary approved absences.

The figures were revealed in a Parliamentary Written Answer from the junior minister Gerry Sutcliffe.

Kent on Sunday revealed in December that a quarter of prisoners at Kent jails are foreigners – costing the taxpayer a huge £33.1 million a year.

Of 3,817 inmates at the county's nine prisons, 894 are from overseas, figures obtained by KoS showed.

KoS men star in Match of the Day

THE arch alone is thick enough to allow a Eurostar train to pass through it – little wonder then the all-new Wembley Stadium is being hailed as one of the world's greatest and most modern stadiums.

And what better stage could there be for David Beckham to make a return to the international fold as England faced the finest purveyors of the beautiful game – Brazil.

But it wasn't just Golden Balls who enjoyed a moment of fame. KOS Media stalwarts Gary Wright and Chris Britcher also found themselves on Match of the Day, as BBC cameras picked out the duo among the 90,000 sell-out crowd and used the footage in the musical montage at the end of the match.

Magnificent

Both admitted to having been taken by the £757million new national stadium.

Sports editor Britcher said: "It is truly a magnificent site. As you walk up Wembley Way you spend the entire time bumping into the backs of people stopping to gawp or take snaps – and you can see why.

"Once in our seats, it was quite an awe-inspiring sight; like a Roman coliseum."

Wright, editor of our sister paper the Saturday Observer, added: "It was a memorable evening. We were sitting three rows from the front, right in front of where Beckham swung in the free-kick that made the goal.

"The game itself was hardly edge-of-your-seat stuff, but being there for England's very first game back at their spiritual home was worth every penny."

The experience clearly buoyed up Steve McClaren's team. On Wednesday night they went to Estonia and won 3-0 – keeping alive their hopes of reaching the finals of Euro 2008 in Austria and Switzerland.

Blair is like a vampire

YOU MIGHT VERY WELL THINK THAT: Michael Dobbs tells KoS his opinion about Prime Minister Tony Blair's legacy

So says the writer Michael Dobbs, the man once described as Westminster's baby-faced hitman. The author of House of Cards gives his verdict on the PM, Cameron and the grammar schools debate

By LUCY BARTON

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HE may not have held a formal political position for a decade, but Michael Dobbs, author and Conservative politician, still has a fiery passion for the Houses of Parliament.

It is not surprising, as it has provided him with two careers since his arrival on the scene. Mr Dobbs had the prestige of standing alongside Margaret Thatcher when she entered Downing Street as Prime Minister, and was present when John Major was forced to leave.

His lofty positions gave him the inspiration to write his best-known novel, House of Cards, in which the devious chief whip, Frances Urquhart, schemed his way to the top job.

Mr Dobbs, a former Tory chief of staff (1986-87) and deputy party chairman (1994-95), has his 14th book, First Lady, coming out in paperback this week.

Proclaimed to be a modern-day version of House of Cards, the book ruthlessly dissects the greed, corruption and lust for advancement of the players in 21st century Westminster.

His latest book, The Lords Day, which will be available in October, is once again set in the Palace of Westminster; however the focus has moved from political skulduggery, to the Queen being taken hostage during the State Opening of Parliament.

While keeping busy writing his latest thriller, he has remained politically active through Tory campaigning and the open criticism of the current government.

Sitting in a deck chair in the garden of Conservative candidate for Thanet South, Laura Sandys, the 59-year-old author looked far too genial to live up to his nickname 'Westminster's baby-faced hitman'. That is until he broached the subject of Tony Blair.

There is clearly no love lost between them. "I honestly believe Tony Blair to be the worst PM in English history. There is no such thing as 'Blairism', he simply takes the line that grabs the biggest headline."

He admits he has never met the PM, yet his disdain for the man he blames for undermining Parliament is obvious. "Westminster used to have a buzz, and you knew things were really happening – now it's gone. Blair goes there reluctantly and treats it with contempt," he says.

"He has been like a vampire, draining the lifeblood out of politics. He has undermined democracy and demolished the public's belief in politicians."

He points out that Blair's legacy will be Iraq, and not the NHS or education. "History will be very unkind to him, as it should."

As a father of four, his concern for the country's immediate recovery from Blair's era is pressing. "It's going to take a lot of wise men and women to repair the damage he and his government have caused, and I'm sure my children's generation will be paying for his mistakes."

Despite his anti-Blair views, Dobbs insists he is anything but a fanatical Conservative.

"While I can't be absolutely sure I will vote for Cameron in the next election, I will be listening very carefully to what he has to say."

That said, his open admiration for the Conservative leader shows his faith in the party's future success. "Cameron is an extremely exciting, ambitious and intelligent man, and of course his party hasn't got everything right, but who has?"

He is, of course, referring to the recent grammar school debate. Mr Dobbs, who was educated at Hertford Grammar, said: "I believe grammar schools still have a place in the education system, but the decision should be left to communities."

"After all, I think they have a far better idea of their own needs than Westminster."

Mr Dobbs seems wary of basing his opinion solely on his personal friendship with the Conservative leader.

"David Cameron has charisma, but then so did Blair, and look where that got us. The next PM must go deeper than that."

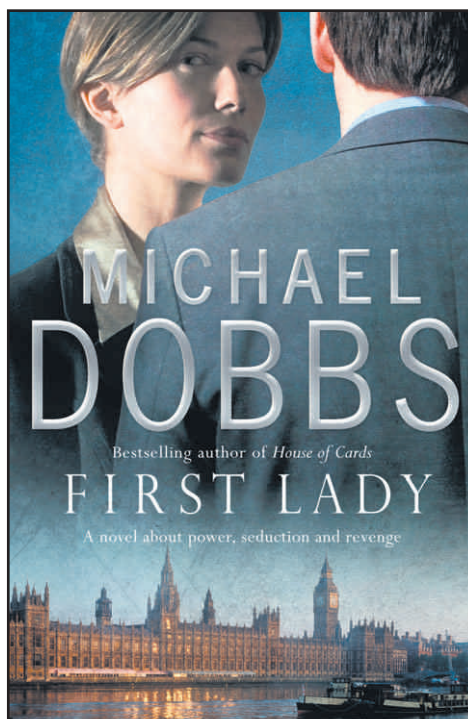

"After all, we didn't vote Margaret Thatcher in time and time again because she was cute and cuddly. It was because she was tough and effective – she wore hobnailed boots and was not afraid to use them."

His new book highlights the importance of seeing politicians as real people. Mr Dobbs points out that one of his personal heroes, Winston Churchill, about whom he has written four books, had many dark secrets and an imperfect personal life.

"This did not make him a bad PM, on the contrary, I believe that these private flaws made him a great leader and an extremely effective politician."

Mr Dobbs' latest book tells of the hijacking of parliament, a situation that he believes to be a real threat. "I can see real flaws in the system," he said. "I hope this book will make them change the way that they look at security. Preferably before something happens."

Perhaps this warning will be taken more seriously after his book, Whispers of Betrayal, published in 2000, told of how a small group of trained and motivated people could hold an entire city to ransom. Little over a year later, the world was rocked by the September 11 attacks.

While many of his characters are a less than flattering reflection on politicians, his work does not seem to have alienated him from his peers. "Rather than closing doors, my writing keeps opening them. Westminster has always been drawn to glamour."

He reminisces that when he first created Urquhart, a number of MPs approached him, each asking if they were the inspiration.

"Urquhart was never based on an individual, he was an amalgamation of many different personalities."

Asked if he would be returning to Westminster, he replied happily, "Well, I've really never left the place!"

Pervert jailed for child abuse DVDs

DVDs containing images of paedophilia and bestiality were seized from a man stopped by customs officers.

Meta Gokce, 41, of London, was jailed for 10 months at Canterbury Crown Court and ordered to register as a sex offender for 10 years.

He was caught at Dover's Eastern Docks by HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) officers in September 2006.

After questioning Gokce, they searched his car and found numerous DVDs, including two hidden in a rear quarter panel of the vehicle.

Maria Finelli, spokeswoman for HMRC, said: "We are working at the forefront of the fight to stop materials of this nature entering the UK and to reduce the associated harm to our communities by working closely with the police.

"We aim to protect society from this activity wherever we detect it, at the borders or inland."

Gokce was jailed on May 30 on two counts of importing materials containing images of paedophilia and bestiality.

He received 10 months imprisonment on each count to run concurrently after originally pleading guilty on April 30.

Reinventing the wheel

Take inspiration from the Tour de France and get on your bike to explore Kent

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

HUNDREDS of cyclists are making the most of the summer weather to explore the Garden of England.

The forthcoming Tour de France, which arrives in Kent on July 8, is encouraging more people to get on their bikes.

And the number of cyclists is set to rise even more with the advent of National Bike Week, which runs from Saturday, June 16 until Sunday, June 24.

Across the UK, more than 250,000 people are expected to take part in the annual event.

Amanda Lumley is Tour de France project manager for the Kent County Council and has led the launch of Go Cycle Kent – a website designed to give people of all ages the information they need to enjoy the best cycling in Kent.

She said interest in cycling was on the rise nationally, with more people seeking pleasurable ways of experiencing the countryside – while keeping fit.

"Kent is a fabulous county for cyclists," said Mrs Lumley. "We have excellent cycle routes through our lanes and back roads and in our country parks, as well as National Cycle Network Routes.

"Cycling has really become popular in recent years – for fun, fitness and to beat the traffic jams.

"Through Go Cycle Kent we are helping people of all ages and abilities get on their bikes and enjoy safe cycling."

The website, www.gocyclekent.co.uk, has details of the best routes for leisure cycling, information about events and clubs, safety tips, advice on choosing the right bicycle and maintenance.

It also explains how businesses can benefit from encouraging staff to cycle to work.

ADVICE: Website encourages people to make the most of the county's cycling routes

WHEEL INTEREST: National Bike Week will see more cyclists take to the county's roads

Safety tips for drivers

MOST cycling accidents happen in urban areas with nearly three quarters happening at road junctions, particularly T-junctions.

The following are tips for drivers from the Institute of Advanced Motorists to improve the safety of cyclists on the roads.

- Judging the speed of a cyclist is often quite difficult – it is likely to be faster or slower than you first think.
- Allow plenty of space as you overtake – riders may swerve suddenly to avoid debris or potholes at the side of the road.
- Don't drive too close behind or alongside cyclists. They are vulnerable and can easily be unsettled when a car feels threatening.
- In traffic, be alert to cyclists passing on your nearside and make sure you don't cut in front of them.

- Be careful not to cut in front of cyclists when you turn left at a junction. Always indicate your intention to turn left – when necessary wait until the cyclist has turned left or passed the junction.
- Park with care. Don't let passengers open a door until you are sure there is no cyclist coming up on either side. Double check for cyclists when opening the driver's door.
- Roundabouts are too often the site of accidents for cyclists. If there is a crash between a car and a cyclist, whoever is to blame, the cyclist will always be more vulnerable to serious injury or even death.
- For further information about safer driving with cyclists visit the Institute of Advanced Motorists website at www.iam.org.uk.

The best way to get around

THE National Cycle Network (NCN) offers miles of signposted cycle routes on quiet country lanes connecting towns and villages throughout the UK.

National Route 1 of the NCN begins at Dover and takes you on the coastal lanes as far as Sandwich.

From there, the route heads north west via Canterbury, Whitstable, Sittingbourne and Gravesend, arriving in London at Greenwich.

CYCLE PATHS: There is a great selection of routes throughout the county

Also starting in Dover, the National Route 2 heads west along the south coast.

There are some spectacular traffic-free sections along cliff-top paths and sea walls at Samphire Hoe Country Park, East Cliff and Warren Country Park, Folkestone's Lower Leas Country Park to Hythe, Dymchurch and St Mary's Bay.

The 11-mile open section of National Route 17 links central Rochester to Maidstone, with about half of the route off-road.

It makes an ideal commuting route between the towns, and arrives in Maidstone alongside the River Medway.

In the long term it will continue to Ashford, and join with Route 2 on the South coast.

National Route 18 of the NCN runs south west from Canterbury, via Ashford and Tenterden, to join up with Route 21 just west of Tunbridge Wells.

The route runs on small country lanes through the High Weald and is the best way to take in Kent's Garden of England scenery, complete with hops, apple orchards, oast houses and picture postcard villages.

Heroes remembered at new housing estate

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

STREETS in a new housing estate have been named after war heroes who served at a famous Battle of Britain airfield.

The Leavesden development is on the site of former RAF living accommodation and Ministry of Defence buildings in Biggin Hill.

Fourteen streets have been named after servicemen and women from the Kent airbase who distinguished themselves during World War Two.

Ceremony

The main street sign is Barwell Crescent, named after Battle of Britain pilot Group Captain Philip Barwell DFC. He was shot down on July 1, 1942, aged 35. His sons John and Richard unveiled the sign in his honour during a ceremony last week.

Others honoured included Pilot Officer Keith Reginald Gillman – the youngest pilot serving at Biggin Hill to be killed. He was reported missing, presumed dead over the English Channel off Dover – his hometown – on August 25, 1940. The Hurricane pilot

PROUD: Sue Gillman, above, at the unveiling of the street sign commemorating her late relative Keith Gillman, top right, who sacrificed his life for his country in World War Two with 32 Squadron RAF was just 19.

One of the most famous pictures from World War Two was taken of P/O Gillman smiling and dressed in flying gear shortly before his death. He is remembered with Gillman Lodge.

Brettell Court is named after a Spitfire pilot from Biggin Hill who took part in the Great Escape, only to be murdered by the Gestapo on the orders of Hitler. Flight Lieutenant Edward Gordon Brettell, of 133 (Eagle Squadron), died on March 1944 at the age of 29.

Allton Lodge takes its name from Sergeant Leslie Charles Allton, a Spitfire pilot with 92 Squadron RAF (VR) who was shot down on October 19, 1940, aged 20.

Squadron Leader Eric Lawrence Moxey GC, a bomb disposal officer, was killed defusing a bomb on the runway on August 27, 1940, at the age of 46. He has had Moxey Close named in his honour.

Three servicewomen who received Military

Medals for bravery for refusing to leave their posts, despite heavy enemy bombing, are commemorated with Mortimer Driver, Henderson Grove and Turner Avenue. They were dragged away to air shelters and are the only names out of the 14 who were not killed in the war.

Cllr Pauline Tunnicliffe, the Mayor of Bromley, welcomed guests including members of the Allton, Gillman and Henderson families. RAF cadets unveiled the street sign on behalf of the Moxey family, while the Mortimers were represented by members of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force Association.

Following the ceremony a Lancaster Bomber from the Battle of Britain Memorial Flight gave a fly-past.

The signs were the idea of Laurie Chester, from the Biggin Hill RAF Chapel.

He said: "This is an excellent way of commemorating the sacrifice and achievements of those who fought here."

"The local people are very pleased with the way the history and heritage of RAF Biggin Hill is being remembered."

Some of the signs are still to be unveiled as the Bryant Homes development will not be finished until early 2008.

Royal opening for £900,000 upgrade at oldest brewery

HOP TO IT: The Duke of Kent (centre) tours Shepherd Neame with Jonathan Neame (left) and production director Ian Dixon

By PETER BOYES

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE Duke of Kent has unveiled a new facility for Shepherd Neame.

He opened the new cask packaging plant following a tour of the Faversham brewery on Tuesday.

According to the company, the £900,000 plant allows for increased energy efficiency and productivity.

Shepherd Neame chairman Miles Templeman said the plant was part of the brewer's drive towards sustainability.

"I hope the rest of the world, particularly China and America, follow suit," he said. "This plant will increase capacity and help us to save energy costs."

The Queen's cousin, who was accompanied by the Lord Lieutenant Allan Willett, said he was delighted to officially open the facility.

Award

Chief executive Jonathan Neame said the visit marked the latest part of Britain's oldest brewery's modernisation programme.

And he said it recognised the company's two recent award wins: the Queen's Award for Sustainable Development and the National Business Award for Corporate Social Responsibility.

"By increasing our efficiency with this investment, we are not only minimising our impact on the environment, but also underlining our reputation as a producer of first-rate cask beer," added Mr Neame.

The chief executive presented the Duke of Kent with a quart bottle of beer, explaining how it had been brewed after his last visit in 1997. Mr Neame said the beer was "extremely strong" and added: "Drink it when you find a private moment."

The Duke was also presented with a Saxon drinking vessel and a book about the history of Shepherd Neame.

A spokesman said the company worked to reduce the environmental impact of its operations by efficient use of natural resources, the use of more renewable energy sources and the use of locally sourced products to help minimise its carbon footprint.

Kent County Council Fostering Service is recruiting Foster carers for Kent's children

Fostering is a career based in your own home, caring for children who are unable to live with their families for many different reasons.

People who foster are as varied as the children they look after, but they all have a real desire to change a child's life for the better. We have established fostering schemes to meet the different needs of the children in Kent's care.

We would like to hear from caring people, who have a spare bedroom and are able to offer a home to older children. We would particularly like to hear from potential carers from Black and Minority ethnic communities.

We offer a range of benefits including a significant financial reward and comprehensive training, along with supervision and professional support from a specialist social worker.

Opera to pull 'em in at pub

A GRAND old pub in Tunbridge Wells is to host a series of operatic arias from July 1.

The Opera House in Mount Pleasant Road will stage three 30-minute performances each Sunday from July 1 to August 5 inclusive at 3pm, 4pm and 5pm.

The performances will be free of charge and will feature the professional operatic voices of Unexpected Opera.

It follows on from the success of Johan Strauss's opera Die Fledermaus (The Bat's Revenge) which enjoyed great success at the pub in February.

Pub manager Jane Read said: "The opera which was staged at the pub in February was an outstanding success and we believe the operatic arias will prove just as popular with customers."

"We are looking forward to the aria season at The Opera House."

KENT ON SUNDAY

COMMENT

Let Hartley stay

KENT on Sunday has been inundated with messages of support for the former West Indies cricketer Hartley Alleyne.

Readers have spoken of their disgust at the threat of his deportation after living in England for nearly 30 years.

It appears as if the Home Office is preying on an easy target, to make ministers look as if they are getting tough on immigration.

But Mr Alleyne is doing a worthwhile job and should be allowed to remain. The idea that not having an NVQ Level 3 qualification means he cannot teach cricket is ridiculous.

His deportation would be heartless – and wrong.

Tour de force

THE Tour de France coming through Kent is sure to encourage more people to becoming involved in cycling.

There is arguably no better way of exploring the beauty of the Garden of England than to pedal through its countryside – and relax and keep fit at the same time.

But cyclists need to be aware of the dangers and make sure they stay alert on busy roads. Similarly, drivers should pay proper attention to those on two wheels.

Lest we forget

THURSDAY marks 25 years since the end of the Falklands War. It may seem like a distant memory for many of us, but it is an ever-present thought for the young men and women who fought in the distant conflict.

A total of 258 servicemen lost their lives and 777 were wounded in the 74-day war.

Their efforts brought lasting peace to the islands and we must not forget their sacrifice.

OPINION:

The Woolmer conspiracy

CHRIS BRITCHER on the murder that never was

SO it seems former Kent hero Bob Woolmer was not murdered.

He was not throttled in his hotel room by an evil match-fixer. Nor was the life wrung out of him by a Pakistan player in a heated row. He wasn't even poisoned by a fanatic muslim furious at his demand the players pray a little less and practice a little more.

He simply died. Of poor health. He was overweight, had diabetes, was under some considerable stress, enjoyed a drink, and it all proved too much for a heart under intense strain.

And the Jamaican police are set to say so too we are led to believe. They are going to hold up their hands and admit the only people

'Cricket was faced with a public relations catastrophe' guilty in the investigation surrounding the popular Pakistan coach was them.

What an almighty cock-up. And what a huge slur the whole investigation caused to the game of cricket.

Let us remember, that prior to his death – in fact just hours before he breathed his last – the ICC Cricket World Cup had just sparked into life.

At long last an emerging cricket nation – in this case Ireland – had toppled one of the game's power-houses, Pakistan.

It was like watching Trinidad & Tobago beating Argentina in the FIFA World Cup. This was big. And this suddenly made the Cricket World Cup exciting.

A few hours later and after Woolmer collapsed in the bathroom of his hotel room a hundred conspiracy theories sprang into life.

By the time police confirmed they believed he had been murdered, the suggestion the Ireland v Pakistan game had been fixed was widespread.

The minnows hadn't played to their best ability and won in the very best sporting style, they said. Something fishy had taken place. The very integrity of the game was brought into question.

The debate which raged in the newspapers and on TV and radio shows in the following weeks suggested the game was riddled with corruption. Players, officials and coaches – you name it, they were all at it.

No-one quite had the proof, so the argument went, but it was likely it was rampant, and look, someone had killed Bob Woolmer – so it must be serious.

MYSTERY? Bob Woolmer

The result was that the Cricket World Cup was clouded completely by Woolmer's death and cricket was faced with a public relations catastrophe. The tournament had hardly been organised well in the first place with lots of empty seats. By the time you threw a slaughtered national coach into the mix the event's marketing was shot to bits.

But it was nothing compared to the Pakistan team's reputation. Every player was viewed with suspicion. Every official suspected of trying to cover up a scandal so huge it resulted in murder.

Yet, here we are, a few short months on, and all the claims, all the allegations, all the conspiracies appear to have sprung from nothing more than the over-active imagination of journalists desperate for a scoop, and some former players who may be regretting cashing in then with tales of widespread corruption.

The problem, of course, is that the wounds inflicted on cricket cannot be corrected with a simple statement and apology. Nor the pain and anguish Woolmer's poor family must have gone through as they contemplated how their loved one had met his death in such a violent and unpleasant way.

Expect those lawsuits to start flying.

Close our borders

A Eurocrat Finn tells us how we must accept immigrant workers and embrace Euroland (KoS, June 3).

I have just returned from a business trip to the Euro Parliament. Until you visit, the sheer scale and cost of this vast monolithic State cannot be put into perspective.

Huge economic imbalances are opening up in Euroland. Unit wage costs in Italy have increased by around 40 per cent since the launch of the single currency, and the pips are starting to squeak. The Euro-Med countries – including France – are heading for deficit. Add to this the annual burden on business from Euroland bureaucracy costing 600 billion euros, not including the compliance costs of the laws.

Lastly, who wouldn't want to employ an articulate, educated and reliable Polish worker rather than an under-educated, unreliable, unemployable Briton? We need to close our borders and re-educate the unemployable; educate our children so they are employable and the long-term unemployable should work in our fields, hospitals and hospitality trade rather than receive continued cushioning by the Nanny state.

We don't have double standards

Following your front page story last week about the percentage of police officers being fined for speeding compared with other motorists, it is important to recognise that where an officer with Kent Police cannot provide a lawful purpose for activating a safety camera, he or she will be issued with a fixed penalty notice or court summons.

The figures you used for 2006 showed 31 fines against officers, a quarter of 136 cases. In 2005 our figures show 34 officers paid fines for speeding while driving police vehicles on duty – nearly half of the 71 instances recorded. To put this in context, the force currently has more than 3,600 officers.

Our Kent Standard, introduced two years ago, sets out the service and standards the public can expect from Kent Police. It gives clear guidance to officers on the importance of complying with road traffic law for normal duties.

Every officer driving a police vehicle is accountable for the way in which he or she drives that vehicle. If they exceed the speed limit they must be able to justify that it was done on the basis of clear operational need.

We are about to install 'black box'-type technology into our vehicles to help us ensure our fleet is used in the most effective way. This will allow us to identify which vehicles are available to respond to calls, but can also be used if we need to review cases where the quality of driving is called into issue.

Kent Police works to national policy to ensure the safety of the public and officers when police are responding to emergencies at speed or when our vehicles are involved in pursuits. Our drivers are trained to a high standard too.

We would be rightly criticised if we were slow to respond to urgent calls. But being criticised in your report for having "double standards" is wrong – Kent Police has vigorous checks and balances to ensure officers drive lawfully. When they don't they face the same penalties as anyone else.

Police can speed

Regarding your story about police cars breaking the speed limit.

You have let your standards drop with this piece of cheap sensationalism, culled from the national press, for a number of reasons.

First, speed awareness training is an alternative to a fine for all drivers. A fact you do not mention.

Second, the other emergency services: fire, ambulance, coast guard are ignored. Why?

Third, there is no evidence as to how the red lights were "jumped" – with care and caution, or blasting through in a dangerous manner. The answer has a major effect on the public interpretation of the facts.

Fourth, and possibly the most important, if I am ever in a life or death situation and need the emergency services, I hope they will turn out fast and not stop to wait for red lights for fear of being prosecuted.

Our local pride

Congratulations on, and thank you for, your article on the new Viking day unit for cancer patients – it was very well written and presented. I particularly enjoyed the closing quotation.

It's great to see such an upbeat story in a world of largely downbeat news.

The unit is a source of tremendous local pride, as well as being an invaluable resource for the people of the whole of east Kent. It's hard to overstate the years of work put in by Maureen Jones, and all the Cancer Care Appeal's workers and supporters, as well as the extraordinary generosity of local people and business.

It's a dirty game

With reference to Mr Staples' letter published last week.

One does not have to be a crackpot to become a politician. On the contrary, one must be very dedicated. Every politician must be able to avoid telling the truth, be self-serving and must not care one little bit about those that have elected him/her.

Is it any wonder that all of us decent, honest people do not want to be associated with politicians and, therefore, do not seek to put themselves forward for election?

Brazen Eurocrats

Reijo Kemppinen from the EU's London Office has got a brazen nerve telling us we can't have any more money and we should be grateful for migrant workers (KoS, June 3).

Most of the money Brussels freely hands out to all and sundry across Europe and beyond in the way of grants comes from British taxpayers in the first place.

Talking of gratitude perhaps this bloke from the European Union should address his remarks to new EU member Lithuania.

Prior to joining the EU Lithuania was handed £45 million of free money from Brussels – much of it our money – to upgrade its railway network.

Once Lithuania became an EU member, it was reportedly one of those who agreed that Britain should lose part of its annual rebate negotiated by Margaret Thatcher.

That's how they express their gratitude for getting so much free money from us is it?

Brussels takes in excess of £30m from British taxpayers every day and for what?

Are British taxpayers really contented to have so much of their money given away?

WIN tickets to Leeds Castle's Open Air Concert season

LEEDS & CASTLE
KENT, ENGLAND

THIS year's Open Air Concert season at Leeds Castle, near Maidstone, offers patriotic al-fresco entertainment with an American twist.

Kicking off the summer season on July 4 is a nostalgic evening concert of Glenn Miller classics with firework finale. A must for music lovers and any homesick American expats.

On July 5, the Bootleg Blues Brothers recreate the energy and excitement of Dan Ackroyd and John Belushi. The duo will storm the stage with a cavalcade of hits, routines and fun, bringing the 1980s cult film to life for fans and fun-seekers.

The James Bond Spectacular on July 6 introduced by special guest Honor Blackman, the original Pussy Galore, is guaranteed to leave audiences shaken and stirred. A fantastic evening of James Bond film classics with the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra. Stunts, pyrotechnics and special effects add to the spectacle.

This year's Open Air Classical Concert on July 7 celebrates American classics from the Wild West to Broadway with a sprinkling of Hollywood magic. And of course the finale will feature the 1812 Overture with cannons and fireworks to stir the spirits.

Tickets cost: £18 per person for the Glenn Miller Concert; £18 for the Bootleg Blues Brothers; £28 for the James Bond Spectacular; and £32 unseated, £38 seated for the Open Air Classical Concert. Tickets can be booked online at www.leeds-castle.com/dv or by calling the Leeds Castle Box Office on 01622 880008, open weekdays from 10am – 5pm (Booking fee applies).

Drop in and find out about courses

By JAMIE MCGINNES

jamie.mcginnes@kosmedia.co.uk

THE University of Kent will be taking learning into the community with a special drop-in session in Chatham.

A university team will be on hand on June 15 to answer questions and give out information on a range of topics, including returning to learning, gaining qualifications, improving skills and learning for pleasure.

Event

The informal event will be of interest to anyone who would like to know more about summer schools, short courses and day and evening classes. There will also be help and advice about part-time and full-time study options at the university, whether at Canterbury, Medway or Tonbridge.

The drop-in session takes place at Chatham Historic Dockyard, near to the main visitors' entrance, from 11am to 1pm.

A second session at the dockyard is planned for August 10.

Michelle Rowe, the university's recruitment manager, said it was the perfect chance to find out more about learning opportunities in a relaxed and friendly environment. "We find that the drop-in sessions are a great way for people to discover all sorts of things about the university and ask as many questions as they want to," she said.

"We're not just talking about degree programmes – people can enjoy studying with us in all kinds of ways. Some might not know, for example, that we offer combined study programmes, or day schools in everything from history to homeopathy.

OPPORTUNITIES: The University of Kent's team will be at the dockyard on June 15

"Many of the classes also give people a chance to take their interests further, have fun and meet new friends and like-minded people along the way."

Financial and study advice will also be available for those potential students thinking of enrolling on a degree programme in a part-time or full-time capacity.

Other information sessions will be taking place at various locations in the county including Maidstone, Whitstable and Dover.

For more details, please contact the University of Kent's information, recruitment and admissions team on 0800 975 3777 or at information@kent.ac.uk.

International recognition for a city college

A COLLEGE has changed its name and been recognised by a prestigious international body.

Stafford House College, in New Dover Road Canterbury, which is now known as CATS (Cambridge Arts and Sciences) Canterbury, has received official recognition from the International Baccalaureate (IB) Organisation in Switzerland.

The college is owned by the education organisation Cambridge Education Group. It is now one of only 98 establishments in the UK certified to offer the IB programme, a qualification accepted by universities worldwide.

Marie-Louise Banning, principal of CATS Canterbury, said: "We are very excited about this key development for our college after such a thorough investigation by the IB inspectors."

Take advantage of government help

BUSINESSES across Kent could be missing out on money-making help from the government, according to a recent survey.

According to an HSBC Bank-sponsored investigation, seven out of 10 small businesses are unaware of existing Whitehall-backed training initiatives.

Awareness of government training schemes was particularly low among micro firms – under 10 employees – with less than a quarter taking advantage of the Sector Skills Councils or the Train2Gain programme.

It also revealed that almost half of the 1,000 businesses questioned gave staff no formal training and the smaller the company the less use of government courses.

Findings of the survey, by the independent Small Business Research Trust, are a blow to government initiatives to raise skill levels by spending half a billion pounds this year, rising to £1bn.

Simon Wainwright, head of business banking at HSBC, isn't surprised by the findings.

"Time and money are rare commodities in most small businesses, so the prospect of having to spend potentially thousands of pounds on training often makes companies unwilling to consider it. However, small businesses are an important part of the economy and increasing their capacity to learn and develop means they will be more resilient, able to grow quicker and create employment."

Teen becomes rugby coach

A TEENAGER has won a prestigious nationwide competition to become a coach with a leading rugby club.

Toni-Anne Pullen, 18, from Kent, won the week-long placement with Newcastle Falcons Rugby Club.

She impressed judges at the Learning and Skills Council to secure the position.

Miss Pullen said: "This is an amazing opportunity and I'm looking forward to learning the ropes of the industry."

"Work experience is a great way to work out what you want to do in life and will also help me to improve my CV and get a job when I leave college."

The placement will consist of joining the community coaching scheme for a week and Toni-Anne will visit local schools and teach rugby skills with a community development coach.

PIG PENS IN TONBRIDGE BECOME HOME TO FORMER MARKET WORKER

The clerk for an auctioneer at Tonbridge cattle market in Kent (from 1946 to when it closed in 1970), has returned to buy a new home on the very same site. Award winning developer Crest Nicholson is creating new homes at 'The Market Quarter' where Mrs Delcie Berry, 76 has returned in great style and bought a charming two bedroom apartment.

The Market Quarter is a pretty development in the town centre alongside the stunning refurbishment of the former Corn Exchange building. Mrs Berry comments: "I have lived in Tonbridge all my life. I have known my husband since we were children as we lived on the same road. My daughter lives here as do my two granddaughters. When I came to look around the development, it was exactly what I was looking for and it bought back so many wonderful memories. The apartment I have bought is actually where the pig pen used to be! I have such fond memories of this place, all filled with laughter but lots of hard work. It really feels like I am going back home."

Set in the popular and historic Slade area of Tonbridge, The Market Quarter is located off the main road in the centre of the town. Mrs Berry comments: "What attracted me was how close it is to the town centre, I don't drive and wanted somewhere which allowed me to walk to the shops and get to my doctor and dentist. This is a stone's throw from everything."

"At least once a year I meet up with my old work friends from the cattle market. We go to each others homes for tea and spend most the time laughing over old stories."

The homes are built to the highest specification with fully fitted kitchens which include electric ovens, combined fridge/freezers and integrated washer/dryers. The properties offer large open living areas, en suite facilities to the master bedrooms and some homes feature spiral staircases.

Pippa Bugby, Sales and Marketing Director, Crest Nicholson comments: "The town centre location of these new homes is wonderful, yet it's off the main road and away from the traffic. We are pleased to offer such affordable housing in this popular market town. Not only is it an ideal place to live but is also tipped as an excellent investment. Market towns are incredibly popular and 70% of those in the UK have seen stronger house price growth than the English average over the past five years."

Prices for apartments start from £245,000 and the houses from £340,000. For sales information, please contact the Sales and Marketing Suite at The Market Quarter on telephone: 0870 750 4890. Alternatively, visit the Crest Nicholson website at www.crestnicholson.com.

- Ideal for the commuter – by road, rail and air
- Good range of public and state schools
- Access to miles of beautiful countryside and picturesque villages
- Various leisure facilities
- River Medway and various parks

Home seekers looking to move into or within the west of the county of Kent are looking for not only the convenience to amenities but also the benefit of the acres of beautiful countryside – well known for the hop fields, apple and cherry orchards as well as the strawberry fields. In addition – the family who is looking for quality schooling for their children need look no further.

Sevenoaks, Tonbridge and Royal Tunbridge Wells offer comprehensive range of schools – including State - Grammar, Secondary and Comprehensive, Private - which include Public Schools in both Tonbridge and Sevenoaks. Tunbridge Wells and Tonbridge both offer a college for further education. The post code lottery is very sensitive for this reason and a waiting list of some preferred schools is inevitable.

The Road links (M.25/M26/M20) and fast train services to London and Ashford International Station also prove important to the commuter both to London and Europe

The West Kent office based in Tonbridge covers the area and offers a good range of homes from the 1 bedroom apartments ideal for the commuter/first time buyer up to a selection of three and four bedroom family homes. With demand for new homes in the area Tina Thatcher, Regional New Homes Director reported that on some developments purchasers have secured the property well before it is completed to ensure they have the property they want and need to live in this sought-after location

5% DEPOSIT PAID: HOW WILL YOU SPEND YOURS?

Purchasers at Countryside Properties' new development Great Easthall, near Sittingbourne in Kent, are being offered some excellent incentives including part-exchange and 5% deposit paid. For expectant parents, David and Rakel Lang, this meant that they had more money to invest in a larger, more comfortable home for their expanding family.

Surrounded by the picturesque Kent countryside, Great Easthall will form the county's newest village and comprise 800 new homes including two bedroom apartments and two, three and four bedroom houses. With the money they saved from the 5% deposit paid by Countryside Properties, David and Rakel were able to rethink their budget and purchase a spacious three bedroom home at Great Easthall just in time for the arrival of their new baby daughter Alisha, who was born in March 2007.

David commented: "The 5% deposit paid incentive that Countryside Properties offered was excellent and was one of the major pulling points for us. With the extra cash it provided we were able to increase our budget and spend more of our own money on a larger, better property that the family can grow in to."

David and Rakel needed to secure a property quickly as they were expecting the arrival of Alisha in March 2007, so Countryside Properties and its recommended solicitor were instrumental in speeding up the process.

David said: "We had initially put in an offer on a property in Gillingham, but due to a five vendor chain the sale was moving slowly and Alisha's expected arrival date was creeping ever closer."

He continued: "In response to a local advert we took a drive up to Great Easthall and were immediately impressed with the scheme, the houses on offer and particularly the show home. Countryside Properties' staff and in particular the solicitor they recommended were extremely helpful, pushing the completion date and the exchange date together so that we would be in our new home before the baby arrived."

Another element of the development that really appealed to David and Rakel were the new facilities included in the scheme and the surrounding area. When complete, Great Easthall will incorporate all the charming characteristics associated with a typical English village including a central village pond, a Kentish orchard, a community allotment, a playing field and a children's play area. Land has also been allocated for the provision of a village primary school, a neighbourhood centre and a local doctor's surgery.

David commented: "It will be great to have a primary school on our doorstep and it will be complete for Alisha to attend in just a few years. Also, long term, the scheme's proximity to Sittingbourne College is excellent."

David had bought a new-build home before and loves the convenience of buying a home that is ready to move into. "New build is excellent, particularly for people with young families and in our circumstance with the arrival of a new baby. We moved straight in and didn't have to worry about modernising or decorating, which would have been extremely stressful and would have meant less quality time with the family."

Yvonne Hudson-Green, Sales and Marketing Director for Countryside Properties, comments: "With all our buyers we try to minimise the stress associated with moving home and incentives like 5% deposit paid and part-exchange go some way to help. We take each purchaser's circumstances in to consideration and in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Lang it was important that they were settled in to their home quickly, therefore we did everything in our power to achieve it."

The show home and marketing suite are open daily from 10.30am to 5.30pm. For further information call 01795 435497 or visit our website on www.greathall.co.uk. Alternatively contact the selling agents - RPC Land & New Homes on 01634 835900 www.rpcnewhomes.co.uk

SEA STREET, WHITSTABLE

Whitstable is a popular seaside resort 7 miles from Canterbury known as the "Pearl of Kent". This title reflects its rich maritime heritage and Harbour where the fishing industry and market provides the main activity.

Whitstable is famous for its Oysters which are available to sample at several seafood restaurants and pubs within the town. It also hosts the Annual Oyster Festival which takes place over 9 days in July and involves parades, street entertainers, bands and local art displays.

The Whitstable Yacht Club is one of the oldest Yacht Clubs in England and focus for this popular water sports destination. Many families take advantage of the shingle and sandy beaches to enjoy swimming, sunbathing and diving.

The town comprises numerous houses, cottages and pubs dating from the 19th Century within its quaint streets which are criss-crossed by many small alleys previously used by fisherman to reach their boats on the beach. In one such street, Sea Street, is a small development of just four 2 bedroom mews style properties recently released for sale.

The houses benefit from a central location, are within the conservation area, have some sea views from the front aspect and have off road block paved parking - a precious commodity in Whitstable, and are built in the traditional weather boarded style.

The kitchens are Implus by German manufacturer Alno and have attractive high gloss finish doors with quality chrome fittings, granite work surfaces and under cupboard lighting. The appliances - oven, hob, integrated fridge/freezer and washer/dryer are manufactured by Bosch. Gas central heating and hot water is provided by an Ideal combination boiler and all radiators are thermostatically controlled. The kitchen leads through to a dining area with access to an enclosed rear courtyard with additional rear pedestrian access and there is a downstairs cloakroom. The floors to the kitchen, halls and bathrooms are laid with Italian Porcelain floor tiles.

The first floor encompasses bedroom 2, a front facing lounge with a polished natural oak timber panelled wood floor and generous provision of television, telephone, power points throughout. In addition the homes are all pre-wired for a multi room concept of entertainment system to enhance audio and visual appliances.

The second floor has a family bathroom with sanitary ware by Twyford, fitted shower baths and Aqualisa Quartz Digital showers and enclosures fitted. The bathroom walls and floors are fully tiled. The master bedroom has conservation style Velux roof windows affording a light and spacious feel to the room.

They come fitted with a burglar alarm system, mains smoke alarm and external security lighting to both the front and rear of each property. All have a 10 year NHBC Buildmark Warranty.

The champagne was flowing at the weekend when award-winning, residential housebuilder, Rydon Homes opened the show home at its newest development, High Trees in East Grinstead. The show home is in one of the four cottages, built in the Arts and Crafts style, using stock bricks and warm, terracotta tile hangings, maintaining a hand-crafted, traditional feel.

A large number of people tore themselves away from the FA Cup final and other sporting events over the weekend to come and see both the interior and exterior style and quality for which Rydon Homes is renowned.

The homes at High Trees are very well suited to the older generation who are looking to move from the big family home and into something easier to maintain. Inside the homes, up to date style is balanced with an uncluttered, clean feel. High-quality contemporary kitchens and Twyford bathrooms with Hansgrohe fixtures feature alongside neutral-coloured living and bedroom areas, enabling buyers to put their own stamp on their new home; be that moving in traditional furniture they have had for years or deciding on a more modern look.

COMPANY GOES FROM STRENGTH TO STRENGTH

RPC Land New Homes has continued its expansion with the creation of a division dealing with the sale and acquisition of new properties for investment.

RPC Investments and Lettings will be set up by new recruit Samia Ahmad, who has a wealth of experience in the sector.

Samia's knowledge of the property business comes from a sales, investments and lettings background. In addition to running her own office, she has worked for some major property companies including Halifax and Hamptons, as well as the London office of Spire International. She has dealt in the property investment sector both in the UK and abroad in Cyprus and Bulgaria.

RPC Investments and Lettings Samia Ahmad

The 43-year-old said: "I am very excited about the prospect of this new role with RPC and am sure I will bring a lot of energy to the position. It's great to be part of something new and I have the right experience and contacts to make this a great success."

She added: "I am very keen to get the investment side established and then move into lettings as we can then provide the full package of services."

Samia will be based in the company's Dartford office and Managing Director Peter Randall said: "This an exciting development in the growth of RPC which in due course will add to the reputation of the company as a leading specialist in Kent and Sussex."

"This is a new direction for the company but is a natural progression of our business and means we can offer a more complete service both to developers and people looking to purchase a new property."

Away from work Samia, who lives in Rochester, enjoys reading, the arts and sailing and is an avid football fan supporting Manchester United.

Contact Samia by email at s.ahmad@rpcinvestments.co.uk or call her at the Dartford office on 01322 228891.

Government plans should help house-builders

Kent property experts RPC Land and New Homes has given a cautious welcome to the Government's Planning White Paper, which outlined reforms to the country's current system, claiming it should help the South East better meet its housing demands.

The wide-ranging White Paper recently announced by Communities Secretary Ruth Kelly outlined proposals for a better, quicker planning system for major projects; the simplification of the local process to make home improvements easier as well as attempts to make planning play a bigger role in tackling climate change.

A key pillar of the new proposals is for the relocation of planning permission for minor developments, such as conservatories and small-scale extensions, where there is no impact on neighbouring properties. It is hoped by making planning permission unnecessary for these type of projects, local council officers will be freed up to spend more time on larger developments.

Peter Randall, Managing Director of RPC, said: "It is good that the Government is taking seriously changes to the planning system, which have been long overdue. Current house building quotas for the South East needed to keep pace with the expected growth of the region are not currently being met and time will tell if this new legislation makes a significant impact."

"It is hoped that by not requiring permission for small residential extension projects, these new measures will free the workload of local planning officers so they can concentrate on bigger schemes. This has got to be a good thing. Also it is proposed that decisions on schemes going to Appeal will also be a lot quicker and that could be a big plus. Currently, schemes going to public inquiry can be drawn out and that is of no help to anyone."

Speak To The Experts

RPC Land and New Homes is committed to providing a professional quality service to landowners and developers alike and can provide expertise that enables a real understanding of what a client requires.

RPC has specialist residential development land agents working throughout Kent, Sussex and South East London.

Benefits of using RPC:

- Senior Directors, each with over 20 years of experience in the residential development market.
- Extensive contacts with key decision makers in development companies operating in the region.
- Comprehensive market research database for new homes.
- We deal with building land.
- Thorough understanding of the new homes market enabling expert advice on scheme proposals and maximising value.

Land team is a growing success

Two new faces are added to strengthen operation

RPC Land and New Homes has strengthened its presence in Kent and Sussex by appointing two new members of staff to its land team.

Kevin Redmond and Nigel Fisher have joined the company which has offices across the region in Ashford, Maidstone, Dartford, Chatham and Tonbridge in Kent as well as Haywards Heath in Sussex.

Kevin, 47, has more than 20 years experience in the property market and moves over to the land side having previously worked for RPC in its New Homes division.

The Eastbourne resident, who will be based at RPC's Haywards Heath office, has had a varied career dealing with investment property, land development as well as new homes.

He said of his appointment: "Moving into the land side of the business full-time was a natural progression for me and I am excited about the opportunities that lie ahead."

"Currently the local market in Sussex is very strong and plots with planning consent attached are proving to be very popular among developers and there is a lot of competition out there."

The married father-of-two enjoys watching rugby and playing golf in his spare time.

RPC Land Director for the Haywards Heath office Tom Cargan said: "I have worked with Kevin for more than 20 years and his knowledge and experience will be very important as we look to continue growing our business."

Nigel, a Chartered Surveyor, joins RPC having spent the last 17 years as a Land Agent working in estate and property management as well as acquisition and disposal of land for the Ministry of Defence in Kent and East Sussex.

Working as an Area Land Director, Nigel, who is married and lives near Canterbury, will be based in the Ashford office focusing on East Kent.

The 43-year-old said: "I am really relishing getting stuck into my new role. I have an extensive working knowledge of the south and east parts of Kent and am looking forward to applying that experience to my work with RPC."

Away from his desk, Nigel enjoys walking his dog, horse-riding, trail hunting and competing in local hunter trials, as well as sheep farming and other countryside pursuits.

RPC Managing Director Peter Randall said: "We are delighted to have someone of Nigel's experience and expertise joining us."

"His arrival is further evidence of our success, which has been built on the foundation of a reputation of being professional in our dealings with landowners and residential developers alike."

Kevin can be contacted at the Sussex office on 01444 416657 or e-mail k.redmond@rpcland.co.uk
Nigel can be contacted at the Ashford office on 01233 619900 or e-mail n.fisher@rpcland.co.uk

Golf range gets trimmed down

EVER keen to rationalize a range that seems to grow uncontrollably, Volkswagen is replacing the existing Golf Sport and GT trim levels with a single all-new model – the Golf GT Sport.

This cut-price GTI lookalike features an all-new darkened grille that links it with its bigger brother and the even more potent R32 Golf flagship.

The grille also features a new 'GT Sport' badge and the nose is framed by darkened headlights above fog lights in the front air dams.

Other distinguishing features are 17-inch multi-spoke 'ClassiXs' alloys and rear twin chrome exhausts plus leather-trimmed three-spoke steering wheel, gearknob and handbrake and front sports seats.

Power options include two versions of the innovative supercharged and turbocharged 1.4-litre TSI engine and VW's renowned 2.0-litre TDI diesel.

Three and five-door models are available with prices from £17,422.

X5 gets M Sport treatment

BMW has not waited long before launching a lucrative M Sport version of the newly arrived X5.

The M Sport sub-brand has become increasingly sought after and desirable as BMW ownership has grown.

Now offered on the £55,440 flagship for the X5 SUV (sports utility vehicle) it brings a sports-orientated package of kit including 19-inch V-spoke 'M Light' alloys, sports suspension, 'M Aerodynamic' body styling, sports seats, matt aluminium window surrounds, high-gloss roof rails, anthracite headlining and M leather steering wheel.

All of which complements a 355bhp 4.8-litre engine capable of powering this big seven-seat car to 62mph in just 6.5 seconds, though driving like that will make mince-meat of an official combined 22.6mpg.

BMW says interest in the new X5 range has exceeded expectations and supplies are forward sold until the end of 2007 – the 3.0-litre diesel variant is accounting for more than 90 per cent of orders and an M Sport version of this is promised by the end of this year.

Hyundai Getz cheaper

IT might not be the most charismatic supermini on the market, but the Hyundai Getz still looks good after five years and comes with a five-year warranty.

It has also been given a freshen up and a big price cut that makes it even better value.

The three-door Getz GSI is now more than £1,000 cheaper at £6,495 – it was previously £7,517. The five-door GSI has been similarly reduced from £8,017 to only £6,995.

The offer lasts until the end of June and also comes with three years' servicing for just £99.

Vehicles shown feature metallic paint available at extra cost (Matiz £325, Kalos and Lacetti £350). 3 years/30,000 miles full service package at an optional cost of £199. Available at participating retailers only. Not available in conjunction with any other offers. The savings are against current MRP and available on UK supplied vehicles ordered and registered before 30th June 2007.

FAT chance Louis Chevrolet would have liked the compact cars that bear his name on the UK market.

But he might have admired the proportions of the company's chunky but smart all-new 5/7-seat Captiva SUV (sports utility vehicle).

One of three famous Swiss-born racing drivers in the early 20th century, Louis teamed up with General Motors to produce big, fast, quality cars and then parted company when GM decided to do the opposite.

Nevertheless, the new 'Chevy' value brand went on to become one of America's most successful and is now going global since taking over the former Daewoo cars operation.

The UK is a primary target and Chevrolet has increased year on year market share by 12.5 per cent so far in 2007, despite a 16 per cent decline in Britain's new car sales overall.

And that's before the launch of the Captiva on June 24 which, based on our first drive, seems likely to boost Chevy's take-off still further through direct sales and the 'halo effect' it will have on lesser Chevys – the Matiz city car, Kalos supermini, Lacetti family line up and the Tacuma MPV.

So far, the Chevy pitch in the UK has followed the Daewoo line – very much a case of never mind the quality, feel the width.

The Captiva delivers more of the same, but a whole lot more and particularly in the SUV sector, where you don't tend to get much for your money.

Admittedly, there is some 'smoke and mirrors' to get you looking in the first place, with prices starting at a crazy £16,995.

Closer inspection reveals this to be for a 'phoney 4x4' two-wheel drive only, five-seater with an asthmatic 134bhp 2.4-litre petrol engine, although it comes with 16-inch alloys, air con and six-speaker audio with controls on the steering wheel.

In reality, nobody will pass up on the punchier 148bhp 2.0-litre turbodiesel, with 4x4, 17-inch

Louis might have been Captiva-ated alloys, electronic stability control, descent control and more, but the price then jumps three grand – more than four if you want seven seats.

That's quite a hike, although SUVs at these prices tend to be smaller or older generation and only one rivals the Chevy for space and seven seats – the slightly dearer Hyundai Santa Fe.

The Hyundai gets my vote as a drive, but it is close and the American 'aura' of the Chevrolet badge – despite adulteration by baby cars like the Matiz – has extra buyer appeal, especially as the '...drove my Chevy to the levee' line from Don McLean's song American Pie should be familiar to the 35-44 target age group.

Chevrolet chose southern Eire for the launch event, perhaps hoping to distract the press with scenery and Guinness, but also risking the car being found out by roads that make our worst look good.

The Captiva rode and gripped the Irish tarmac well though; the diesel manual is a bit clunky, but the auto is an effortless drive with decent manual selection when necessary.

Interior trimming is not too cheap or flashy and appears durable.

The fully loaded LTX auto flagship with seven seats is the pick – the chrome tailpipes and rear end skid pan epitomise its good packaging. It is still well-priced at £24,920.

Hyundai SantaFe

HERE'S a good laugh. Buy a Hyundai Santa Fe and strip off the Hyundai badges.

Then do the school run, park in the MD's space at work and, finally, blag your way into a society do by simply dressing in black tie or posh frock – whatever your persuasion – and then crunching up Lord Wotsit's gravelled driveway and handing the keys to the butler.

Unless they know their motors, anyone seeing you with that badgeless car will think you are loaded even if they cannot quite place the make and model.

Me, I don't care whether the badges are on or off – pound for pound, this has to be one of the best and smartest SUVs (sport utility vehicles) on the market.

Where the original Santa Fe adopted an awkward off-roader 'funky chunky' look and aimed at the Toyota RAV4/Nissan X-Trail sector, its successor is an altogether sleeker car that has grown in size and class – Hyundai's baby SUV is now the Tucson.

So radical is the change that the only thing I saw carried over from the original car was the offset rear tailgate handle.

With size has also come the option of seven

Santa Fe trail gets smoother seats, adding £1,025 to prices and making the Santa Fe a possible MPV alternative, especially as you have no need to shrink for access or use of the rearmost pair.

Admittedly, you will adopt the 'knees up' shape so typical of the type and headroom is tight, but you don't feel hemmed in and the seats are easy to fold flat or re-erect.

Accommodation and ambience are good generally, with fixtures and fittings of a higher order than the previous model, though standard 'wood' trim on the dashboard looks plasticky.

There is lots of stowage, including a cavernous centre console and chiller and his 'n' hers sunglasses/specs cases in the roof.

I was also pleased to see a cassette slot in the excellent audio system, giving me a chance to play albums that I really should have chucked by now – how long before this feature disappears completely from cars though?

I was less impressed by the screenless sat nav system; when you can buy an excellent after-market TomTom or Garmin touch screen unit for so little and makers such as Seat are fitting them straight into their cars, Hyundai's approach seems silly for a brand priding itself on value.

The driver enjoys a commanding view though and the Santa Fe proves to be a rewarding drive for such a big vehicle.

Yes, there is some yield on the bends, but forgivable when the car rides smoothly and tackles rough tracks with little fuss; the car runs mostly in two-wheel drive and switches extra traction to rear wheels when a loss of grip is sensed, but full four-wheel drive can be selected by a switch on the dash.

It is not a true off-roader, of course, but there is enough grip and ground clearance to suggest that it won't let you down in anything but challenging situations.

The good feeling was no doubt helped by the power option on our test car – the slick four-cylinder 2.2 diesel auto flagship model. The five gears are well spaced to make the car a good town or motorway car and the manual select option works well if you want a sportier drive from the strong pulling diesel.

There is a 2.7 V6 auto petrol alternative that I have not driven, but I cannot see many takers – the diesel is terrific and matches the petrol for performance while averaging at least 10mpg extra.

On top of the looks, a typically generous Hyundai specification and the Korean marque's five-year warranty, the Santa Fe is also astonishing value – even if you feel the need to chuck the badges away.

Points means prizes for hotel employees

Positive incentive scheme for staff

THE owner of two major Kent hotels has introduced a new staff incentive system to offer "instant recognition" to hard-working employees.

QHotels, which owns Ashford International Hotel and Bridgewood Manor in Chatham, has brought in ThankQ4, a points-based scheme for staff whose work has a positive effect on the customer experience.

The system is different, says the company, because staff as well as managers can nominate colleagues for their work.

Employees can convert their points into prizes, including a bottle of wine for five points, a meal for two for 50 points, or a spa break for two for 100 points.

Nichola Roskell, HR director at the chain, said: "We believe that our employees are the heart of our business."

"We aim to recruit, train and develop the very best people available and incentivise them so that we can provide a superior level of service consistently across the group, which will enhance our customers' experience with us."

QHotels has invested more than £100million into its 22 hotels.

Ashford International hotel is currently undergoing a £7.5m refurbishment.

QUALITY women's fashion store Monsoon is to open a branch at Westwood Cross shopping centre.

The high street retailer will open on June 28 and will occupy a 2,250 sq ft unit.

Monsoon joins HSBC, Claire's, River Island, Fusion Hair & Beauty and the JJB Fitness Club and Superstore among others at the Thanet shopping centre.

Westwood Cross opened in June 2005 and attracts an average of 74,000 visitors each week.

Smoke at work? Forget it

IT cannot have escaped anyone's notice that smoking in public places is soon to be illegal. Scotland and Wales already have this legislation in force and as from July 1 the Smoke-free (Premises and Enforcement) Regulations 2006 comes into force in England.

Much of the regulations centre on the definition of an "enclosed space" and what amount of windows or openings are necessary before the space is no longer enclosed (more than half, if you really want to know, but that doesn't count windows that can be shut.)

Criminal offence

It is no surprise therefore that this will cover the workplace, so what are the facts?

As from July 1 it will be a criminal offence, punishable by a fine or fixed penalty to smoke in enclosed public spaces which includes places open to the public by invitation or not, and whether by payment or not. Premises used as a place of work (including voluntary work) by more than one person (even if those who work there do so at different times, or only intermittently are included. This will include works vehicles such as company cars.

Anyone occupying or managing premises will have a duty to put up no-smoking signs or risk a fine or penalty. Furthermore the manager will have a duty to prevent anyone (not just staff but clients and visitors) smoking on the premises and failing to comply with this duty could also result in a fine.

By AMANDA FINN

So what should employers be considering?

- Where not already in place, employers need to develop and implement a smoke-free policy

- Communicate and train all employees as to what is expected of them and how they might deal with customers

- Order and display no-smoking signs in appropriate places for not only staff but visitors to the premises

- Remove all assistance given to smokers (ie smoking rooms, ashtrays)

- Be aware of the action needed to be taken when someone smokes in the premises

- Update disciplinary policies to include smoking as a disciplinary offence.

Dartford law firm celebrates

A LEADING law firm which has been practising in Kent for nearly 300 years has celebrated the anniversary of its first year in its new Dartford office.

Buss Murton LLP started life in Cranbrook in 1713, opened in Tunbridge Wells in 1797, where the firm is now headquartered, and opened in Dartford in 2006.

The partners threw a party last week to commemorate the first year in Dartford.

Guests included Eric Pickles MP, the shadow local government minister, Alex King MBE, deputy leader of Kent County Council and Councillor Jeremy Kite, leader of Dartford Council.

Buss Murton senior partner Robert Sedgwick said: "Obviously office openings are not an everyday event for Buss Murton, indeed they only come along every couple of hundred years, so it is with particular pleasure that we celebrate our first successful year in Dartford."

Mr Pickles congratulated the firm on choosing a location that was part of the largest regeneration project in Europe and Cllr Kite welcomed "the fact that the firm had recognised the importance of Dartford as a town in which to do business in the fast-growing services sector and as a strategic access to the Thames Gateway".

Declaring all your offshore accounts June 22 deadline for disclosure

By Liz Rule
Pharon Independent
Financial Advisers Ltd
01227 787000

FOR some time, Her Majesty's Customs and Revenue has been concerned there are many UK taxpayers who have money in offshore accounts that do not pay tax on the interest.

The accounts in question are mainly in Jersey, Guernsey and the Isle of Man.

Information-sharing powers mean that the Revenue does indeed have information on offshore account holders, including the interest that they have been earning and obviously they know whether any tax has been accounted for.

Much of the information has been provided by high street banks, which were required to give details of their offshore account holders.

In an effort to encourage these individuals, trustees and companies to declare and pay tax, the Revenue has offered a "disclosure facility".

This facility means that any outstanding tax can be declared and paid with just a 10 per cent fixed penalty.

This might not sound attractive, but compared to future potential penalties of between 30 per cent and 100 per cent depending on the nature and severity of the case, it could be worthwhile grabbing the opportunity.

The deadline for disclosure is June 22 to tell the Revenue there is "something to declare"

November 26 is the deadline to have then completed all calculations and paid the tax. No penalty will be levied where the amounts due are less than £2,500.

On April 30 2008, the Revenue will open an investigation into anyone they know should have disclosed and hasn't.

While I hate to admit it, this facility seems quite fair, the tax should have been accounted for anyway, and the Revenue is not penalising people with trivial amounts. I would encourage anyone, who has these kinds of liabilities to use it, as the consequences later could be quite severe.

If you are in any doubt speak to your accountant or financial adviser.

Service sector employment's massive boost

THE number of jobs in professional services, such as accountancy, law and property, rose at the fastest rate in nearly 20 years, according to the latest survey of the sector.

Three months of buoyant growth in consumer services and continuing high demand for business and professional services have led to very strong growth in service sector employment, said the CBI/Grant Thornton survey.

The quarterly survey revealed that the number of people employed in consumer services, such as hospitality, travel and leisure, increased at the strongest rate for two years.

Malcolm Hyde, CBI South East regional director, said: "The importance of the service sector to the region's economy cannot be overstated. Today, it is the largest employer and a major contributor to the UK's competitive advantage."

"The key challenge for many businesses in the region is recruiting and retaining the right people."

■ Bouverie Place Shopping Centre, the £30million Warner Estate and Bride Hall project in the heart of Folkestone town centre, is progressing smoothly, say developers.

Building works are set to be completed later this year, and the centre has now reached its highest point in construction.

Fears for Walker

Stones boss 'paralysed' in training accident

By CHRIS BRITCHER

MAIDSTONE United co-manager Alan Walker will learn this week if he will be able to walk again, after a freak horror injury left him partially paralysed.

The 47-year-old is set for major spinal surgery on Tuesday at a hospital in Belfast after he collapsed when heading a ball during a training session.

Walker, a former Gillingham player and one of Kent football's best-known figures, having played at Chatham, Sittingbourne and Maidstone during a lengthy career, had been in Northern Ireland along with joint boss Lloyd Hume.

Walker was travelling with him as an observer, with Hume studying for his UEFA coaching licence.

But when Walker headed a ball during a training session on Tuesday disaster struck and he collapsed.

Walker explained from his hospital bed at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Belfast: "Basically I went to head the ball and was knocked unconscious. I came round in the ambulance where I found myself paralysed."

"The doctors have told me I suffered damage to my spinal cord as a result of one of my vertebrae coming into contact with the nerve."

"I have gradually got some feeling back, but I need to rest until they can operate on Tuesday to look at the extent of the damage."

"What they have said is this will mean a long period of rehabilitation and time to rebuild my strength."

OPERATION: Alan Walker is set to undergo surgery on his damaged spine

The injury casts a huge shadow over Maidstone United's plans for next season.

Walker and Hume have developed into one of the most sought-after managerial double-acts in non-league football.

Securing back-to-back promotions first from the Kent League and then into the Ryman League Premier Division, the duo had only last month put pen to paper on a new deal tying them to the club for another season.

They twice won the Ryman League manager of the month award, and were named Division 1 South Managers of the Year.

Walker is also a 'lead mentor' for the Football Association – one of only 40 nationally. This role requires him to oversee a pupil through their advanced coaching course. It was while fulfilling this role with Hume in pursuit of his UEFA A Licence, the accident occurred.

Stones chairman Paul Bowden-Brown said he was devastated when he heard the news.

He told Kent on Sunday: "Apparently he has discovered, as a result of this accident, he has a weakness of his spine from birth which he wasn't aware of. At the moment it appears to be very serious and there are a lot of very worried people."

Prognosis

"Obviously, at this time my thoughts are with his wife and family."

Surgeons are expected to be able to offer a prognosis within 72-hours of Tuesday's surgery.

Bowden-Brown added: "Last season Alan suffered with his back and neck and was struggling around for six to eight weeks. He had various tests and scans and nothing showed up."

"But I know he's a very worried man right now. I'm gutted and shocked."

"This is not going to go away in five minutes – this is a serious injury and we don't know at this stage what is going to happen in terms of his role at the club."

"In the two years since Walker joined he has become an integral part of the club's success. I just want him to get better as soon as possible."

Walker is currently head of education and coaching at the Kent Football Association.

DTM ace on Hamilton's trail

ELEVEN years ago Gary Paffett stood upon a podium at Chatham's Buckmore Park karting circuit – his beaming face hinting his career was set to accelerate.

Alongside him on that fateful day; one Lewis Hamilton – four years his junior and a man who today is tipped as a future Formula One champion after a dazzling start to his rookie season.

But while the riches and fame of the F1 circus have elevated Hamilton to superstar status, Paffett is not far behind.

Stepping stone

Buckmore Park has a good reputation for developing the young talent of tomorrow.

Hamilton's emergence has highlighted how the kart track is proving a vital stepping stone for racers as they clamber up the greasy pole in pursuit of motorsport's most precious prize; an F1 seat.

Born and raised in Bromley, Paffett is already familiar with Hamilton's new world. Last year he performed testing duties for the McLaren-Mercedes F1 team and many – including Buckmore Park boss Bill Sisley – believe he will make the step up to the premier series in the coming months; ironically the same team for which Hamilton has helped fire to the top of the constructors' championship.

Alongside him in the picture are McLaren boss Ron Dennis and then team driver David Coulthard.

This weekend, however, he has a more pressing task at hand – cementing his position at the top of one of the most competitive touring car series in the world.

The German DTM championship currently sees Paffett perched in fourth place in the race for the title and today it roars into Brands Hatch – with the 26-year-old determined to mark his first UK appearance in the series in style.

Paffett explained: "I haven't raced here for seven years and never in a DTM car so it's going to be a steep learning curve."

"But as Brands Hatch is my home circuit, I'll be going flat out for a win this weekend."

He fired himself up the title table with a superb victory in the second round of the series in Oschersleben last month and will look to improve on the 1.2mile Indy track at Brands – the shortest circuit on the DTM calendar.

Paffett added: "The Indy circuit is tight and twisty, so it's going to be important to do well in qualifying."

"Nevertheless, with the fans behind me, I'm looking forward to getting down to business."

'Like Beatlemania'

By CHRIS BRITCHER

AS KENT coach Graham Ford ponders a possible move to take over the India national team, one man who man a similar leap has warned Ford to brace himself for a culture shock.

John Wright was Kent coach from 1997 to 2000 before he too was lured to the sub-continent.

And the popular New Zealander says nothing prepared him for the switch from the quiet life in Canterbury to the hullabaloo which surrounds the team of one of the most fanatical cricketing nations in the world.

Crowd

Writing in his lively new book, John Wright's Indian Summers, published later this month, Wright explains: "Although Kent got good crowds by county cricket standards, their supporters weren't all that vocal or, for that matter, positive."

"In India we sometimes had 4,000 people watching us practice. A 3,000-strong crowd turned out at Bhubaneswar Airport to greet local hero Shiv Sundar Das after his debut Test century. The police had to form a cordon so we could get to the bus."

"It reminded me of images of Beatlemania."

Wright was coach of Kent during one of the club's more successful seasons in recent years.

His first year in charge saw the county finish runners-up in three of the four domestic competitions; missing the Championship crown by four points to a Glamorgan side coached by Duncan Fletcher.

Dumped by Kent in 2000, the former New Zealand captain became India's first foreign coach. He enjoyed a five-year reign, during which he took the nation to their first World Cup final in 20 years. He was replaced in 2005 by Greg Chappell – who in turn resigned following the World Cup earlier this year; creating the opportunity Ford is being interviewed for.

But it was the huge change in the approach to the game and its stars on the subcontinent which most struck him when he swapped the subdued St Lawrence for the chaos of Kanpur.

Wright explained in his book: "The India players are absolutely adored. Everyone wants a piece of them, take a photo of them with their mobile phones, introduce their kids to them."

"If you were in the aisle seat on an aeroplane next to Sachin Tendulkar, you spent the flight trying to avoid being elbowed in the face by autograph hounds. He never refused."

"People would line the roads outside towns and villages waiting for our bus to go past, even though they couldn't see the players behind tinted windows and drawn curtains."

"In Jodhpur, I went with a few players – not the superstars – to a department store in the main street. When we came out, after an hour there must have been 2,000 people waiting for us."

"They'd spilled onto the road, blocking traffic and I counted 35 people struggling to restore normality."

• John Wright's Indian Summers is published on June 21 by Souvenir Press. It costs £18.99.

Charlton plan flight back to top league

IN JUST four days Charlton fans will be able to plot their route back into the Premiership, writes Gary Haines.

Thursday, June 14, a little over a month after Charlton's seven-season top-flight tenure ended at Anfield, is when the 2007/2008 Championship fixture list is unveiled.

And while the likes of Old Trafford and Stamford Bridge will be replaced by Home Park and Ashton Gate, it's a period of the summer that never fails to whet the appetite of supporters up and down the country.

Dynamics

Having finished in the top nine in each of his four seasons in the second tier of the English game, reaching the play-offs three times, once with Reading and twice with West Ham United, Addicks boss Alan Pardew is fully aware of the dynamics of the Championship.

And he has already been busy in the transfer market as he plots an immediate return to the Promised Land at the first attempt.

Hot on the heels of the striking signings of Chris Iwelumo and Luke Varney, from Colchester United and Crewe Alexandra respectively, the Valley boss has made former Leicester City skipper Patrick 'Paddy' McCarthy his third capture of the close season.

The Dublin born centre-back, 24, swapped The Walkers Stadium for The Valley in an initial £650,000 deal, signing a four-year contract.

And he was delighted to join the Addicks, immediately setting his sights on a Premiership place come the end of the season.

He explained: "It took the manager just two minutes to convince me. He was really positive and sold it to me. He told me how good the club was, how much potential there is here and what type of team he's looking to put together next season. Everything he said was exactly what I wanted to be a part of."

"Of course the Premiership is where everyone wants to be and a big part of the move here was that I believe myself and the club will be playing there in the near future."

"I know more than most that this is a tough league and when teams are playing against big clubs in big stadiums they always up their game."

"You need characters in the team in this league and there are some tough places to go, places you need to go on a cold and wet Tuesday night and need everybody to stand up and be counted."

"If there are not eleven players in the team that are willing to stand up and be counted you will not progress."

"I think it will stand us in good stead that we have now got a couple of players in that do know the league and hopefully that will make us strong for next season."

McCarthy, who played in the same Ireland B team as new teammate, goalkeeper Darren Randolph, last season, played 82 times for the Foxes and was skipper last season.

He joined the Midlands club from Manchester City in 2005 after failing to make a first-team appearance at Eastlands.

Gills to unveil duo

FOOTBALL: Gillingham chairman Paul Scally jetted out to Portugal this week for the Football League chairmen's annual meeting – which may explain why news of new signings have not yet been confirmed.

However, he will return tomorrow, fuelling speculation that the announcements of newcomers and exiting former favourites could be just days away.

It is widely believed Cheltenham Town's Craig Armstrong has signed a two-year deal and that Rotherham United striker Delroy Facey has also agreed terms.

Midfielder Danny Spiller, it seems, is about to sign on the dotted line for Millwall.

'Woolmer police should be sued'

CRICKET: Pakistan legend Imran Khan has called on the country's cricket board to sue Jamaican police over the handling of the Bob Woolmer death investigation.

Despite initially claiming the former Kent star (pictured) had been murdered – prompting claims of match-fixing in the Pakistan camp and casting doubt over players and officials – it is expected to be confirmed he died of natural causes.

Khan said: "In my opinion the PCB should sue for defamation. If I was the Pakistan captain I would have asked for damages."

"They should also sue former Pakistan fast bowler Sarfraz Nawaz, because he was the first one to raise allegations of the Pakistan team's involvement with bookies."

Dryden stays

FOOTBALL: Dover Athletic striker Jimmy Dryden has signed a new one-year deal with the club – the first out-of-contract player to commit to new boss Andy Hessenthaler.

The former Gillingham player-manager said said: "I've got some players earmarked to strengthen the squad and I'm talking to a quality full back this weekend. I'm also going to get Jimmy a decent strike partner."

INTERVIEW: Graham Ford is in India, where he is wanted as national coach

SPITFIRES AIM TO CLIP HAWKS' WINGS

In-form one dayers bid for Trophy final

By CHRIS BRITCHER

THE Kent Spitfires will today wage war with Shane Warne's Hampshire Hawks, knowing a win will put them within touching distance of a Lord's final.

Victory in front of a bumper crowd at Tunbridge Wells will guarantee a semi-final berth in the one-day Friends Provident Trophy competition.

But they are set to go into battle without coach Graham Ford. He was due to be in Chennai yesterday for an interview for the vacant position of head coach of the India national team.

And speculation was mounting during the week that if a deal can be hammered out he could be set to bid farewell to Kent before the end of the month.

Such a decision would be a huge blow to the county's season which has started – at least in the one-day game – with such promise.

Advantage

The Spitfires currently sit top of the Southern Conference of the Trophy, with a one-point advantage over nearest rivals Surrey. The top two teams then meet the top Northern Conference clubs to battle it out for a place at Lord's.

If Kent win and then beat Gloucestershire on Wednesday at the Nevill Ground, it will set up a money-spinning home clash at Canterbury in the last four on June 20. The final takes place on August 18.

Whether Ford is around to lead the side to the final remains to be seen. Reports from the subcontinent suggest Ford is the preference of a number of India's top stars and is the favourite on the two-man shortlist to replace Greg Chappell.

Chappell quit one of the global game's most pressurised positions after a disappointing display in the ICC Cricket World Cup earlier this year.

Ford's rival for the role is ex-England spinner John Emburey – the current director of cricket at Middlesex.

If Ford was to walk out on the club it will also raise a huge question mark over the future of a string of stars who have jetted in from Ford's homeland of South Africa to swell Kent's ranks.

Among those attracted to the county because of Ford's position are Andrew Hall, Martin van Jaarsveld, Neil Dexter and newcomer Ryan McLaren.

Not that Kent are keen to let the former South Africa national coach go.

Chief executive of the club, Paul Millman, told KoS: "Graham is contracted to us until the end of the 2008 season and we will do everything we can to keep him here. We have allowed him to go on a fact-finding mission to India but hope he will remain at the county."

"The team are not affected by all the talk. They know they have a job to do and are professional enough not to let this have an impact on them."

Ford joined Kent ahead of the 2005 season. He has hardly dazzled but the likes of van Jaarsveld and Hall have proved shrewd additions to the squad.

During the winter months Ford had been hired as coach of South Africa's Nassau Dolphins – but unexpectedly quit last October, citing personal reasons.

One boost for the Spitfires today should be the return of Matt Walker to the fold.

He was forced to miss this week's Championship game with Yorkshire due to an injury to his finger.

The match also marks the first appearance of Australian spin legend Shane Warne; back in the county since the ECB rapped him over the knuckles for his petulant display at Canterbury last month.

During the Championship clash, Warne was given out lbw by umpires – but disagreed, stomping back to the dressing room swearing and shouting.

Reported by match officials, he was issued with six disciplinary points. Three more within two years and he picks up an automatic ban.
